Captain MacNaught's Long Career Was Saga Of The Sea

PORTLAND, OREGON — Capt. William C. McNaught, 92, Portland's "most ancient mariner," who died Nov. 12, 1958 was for many years a leader in the Portland maritime scene as chief surveyor or the Board of Marine Underwriters and a member and chairman of the Oregon State Board of Pilot Commissioners.

For 6½ years he had resided at the Portland Medical Hospital and had been blind more than five years. Many of his friends joined in a birthday party for him September 29, when he turned 92, and he received a large number of cards and gifts. A feature of the day was a long distance telephone call to his brother James McNaught, Hyde Park, Mass.

AT SEA WHEN 17

After that day, Captain McNaught's health declined rapidly and he finally succumbed from the debilities of age and weakened heart. He will be buried in Lincoln Memorial Park.

Captain McNaught was born September 29, 1866, at Coleman on Prince Edward Island, son of Alexander MacNaught and Mrs. MacNaught, and went to sea at the age of 17, a common custom in that community. His first berth was on a 130-foot brig, the Ariadne, carrying canned lobster to London. He shifted to American vessels sailing out of Boston and New York and became master at the age of 30. He sailed for 17 years more, visiting every ocean.

He shifted his home port in 1901 to San Francisco and soon after married a girl from his home community. Mrs. McNaught sailed with him for several years and one of their three sons was born at sea on the full-rigged ship S. P. Carlton. His whole family accompanied him on his last voyage, prolonged to nine months, to Australia and return.

CHIEF MARINE SURVEYOR

Captain MacNaught left the sea in 1913 to become chief surveyor for the Board of Marine Underwriters at Portland and moved his family to this city. He retired from that position in 1932 but he continued as a member, and most of the time as chairman, of the State Board of Pilot Commissioners, for 18 years. He was a charter member of Portland Shipping Club.

All three of the sons turned to maritime pursuits. The second son, Harold, became a chief officer in the States Steamship Co. He was lost when the freighter Oregon was run down by an American warship near Boston three days after the United States entered into World War II. The eldest son, Kenneth, died in 1943 when he was chief mate on a Luckenbach Line ship. The surviving son, Robert, lives in Portland, at 6201 NE 24th. Ave., and is a checker on the Portland waterfront.

Mrs. MacNaught died several years ago.

In addition to the son in Portland and brother in Hyde Park, Captain MacNaught was survived by a sister, Lilly MacNaught, at the homestead at Coleman, Prince Edward Island, and three grandchildren in Portland.

J. Watson MacNaught, Q. C., Summerside is a nephew.

Injured Man Released From West. Hospital

ALBERTON — Ray Keough of Christopher's Cross near Tignish, who received minor facial injuries in an accident at Tignish Corner late Saturday night, was released from hospital last evening.

The driver of the accident vehicle, Reg Shea of Waterford was released from the hospital on Sunday. Another passenger, Irene Harper of Tignish was not taken to hospital.

The accident occurred when the 1953 truck skidded on an icy stretch of road and went into the ditch. The vehicle was badly damaged.

Asks For Report On Road Project

TORONTO (CP) — Highways Minister Cass of Ontario Monday asked for a report into plans for resurfacing a 10 - mile concrete section of highway 400 just north of Toronto.

The highways department Monday disclosed it has decided to resurface the section, in operation less than eight years, with announcement of work tenders for paving. A department spokesman said the resurfacing is to remove bumps.

Mr. Cass said he will issue a statement after receiving the report from his department engineers.

In Kitchener, Ontario Liberal Leader John Wintermeyer demanded to know why it is necessary to order the resurfacing.

He said "was it faulty engineering or was it faulty contracting work? The public is entitled to know."

Berlin Marks Division Date

BERLIN (Reuters)—West Berlin Monday commemorated the day 10 years ago when the city was divided between East and West.

Ten years ago Monday the city government moved to the Western sector from the original city hall in the Russian zone after Communist demonstrators stormed the building.

The Communists boycotted the city parliament's sittings in the West and instead, with Russian sponsorship, set up their own administration in East Berlin.

From that day, Berlin has been split into two administrative parts, one Western and one Communist.

Observance took the form of a one-minute silence. Traffic stopped on the streets. Productions halted in factories. Workers everywhere laid down their tools.

The East sector celebrated the anniversary Sunday with a parade in which marchers displayed slogans supporting last week's Soviet plan for the establishment of a demilitarized "free city."

Election

what has transpired in Canada under the "Tory rule".

"I have in mind," he said, "the serious unemployment situation; the tremendous deficit of one billion dollars against the last Liberal surplus; the ability to solve the freight rate crisis to deteriment of the west and east; and inflation that will shortly leave the old age pension with less purchasing power than $46 of the Liberal regime.

"I come to the conclusion that the country took a much worse beating at the polls than the Liberal Party received."

In speaking on the unemployment situation Premier Matheson said he has had more applications for jobs in the past year then in the past 10 years of Liberal Government. The main reason he said was that the group of men in Ottawa "are inexperienced."
