MONCTON'S MURDER.

THE BURGLAR BADLY WOUNDED.

Retaliation Begun by the United States.

[SPECIAL TO THE GUARDIAN.]

MONCTON, August 2.—No news has been received as to who is held for the murder of policeman Steadman, nor has any trace of his companions been found. The man refuses to say who he is. He is badly wounded and in a helpless condition.

[Some sensational reports respecting highway robbers in New Brunswick have appeared of late in the St. John and Moncton papers. It was said on several occasions they had attacked passing travellers in the darkness, and that revolvers had been used. A commercial traveller was one of these, and he had a narrow escape. Monday night two suspicious characters, agreeing with the description of the highwaymen, were noticed in Moncton, and put up at a house of ill repute kept by a Mrs. Donnelly. The Marshall and the whole police force—consisting of four men—repaired to Donnelly's house to make the arrest. Officer Steadman was stationed at the back door, another at the window and another at the front door. When the Marshall entered the house the two burglars immediately made a dash for the back door. The first man to come out was felled by Steadman, when the burglar at once began firing. The officers hurried to the scene and found Steadman engaged in a struggle with one of the burglars. If that burglar had not managed to hold his man. When the ruffian was knocked down and handcuffed, Steadman threw up his hand and said: "My God I'm murdered!" He sank to the ground and expired in five minutes. The shot took effect in his left breast, over the heart. The burglar arrested was shot in the leg. He is about five feet seven inches tall, weighs probably 150 pounds, and is a brutal looking fellow with high cheek bones, unshaven face and altogether a tough looking fellow. He is identified as one of a gang caught stealing a ride on a train between Campbellton and Chatham one day last week. Intense excitement prevails and there is talk of lynching the prisoner.)

Another Sanction.

The Shelburne Budget is despised by D. D. Currie. A recent St. John despatch to the Herald, said:

Rev. R. S. Crisp, Methodist, in preaching his farewell sermon, said that a few people in the congregation had made the minister's wife a veritable hell on earth, and there are some ministers who if exchanged for convicts from Dorchester penitentiary, the church would get the best of the bargain.

The Budget editor comments: Of all the many Methodist clergymen we have known, there is none who, in our judgment, is so worthy of a place among the convicts of the Dorchester penitentiary as the Rev. Robert S. Crisp himself.

The Budget makes specific charges. The rev. gentleman is a prominent minister of the Methodist church in New Brunswick, whose reputation, so far as the public knew, has been above reproach. In order to vindicate his character he will doubtless give the Budget an early opportunity of proving its allegations in a court of law.—Hix, Herald.

A later St. John despatch says: A profound sensation has been caused here by the republication of an article in the Shelburne Budget concerning Rev. R. S. Crisp, Methodist minister at Woodstock. Rev. D. D. Currie, editor of the Budget, was expelled from the Methodist conference on the charge of improper conduct, and the Budget's allegation seems to be that Crisp was the guilty party. The Budget statement that Crisp had confessed his guilt is either an attempt to bluff or an invitation for a libel suit. The leading Methodist minister of this city says the statement as made makes it necessary for Mr. Crisp to take some action to vindicate himself.

A Big Contract.

TORONTO, Aug. 2.—Congressman Hill says that President Harrison has taken preliminary steps to put the retaliation act in force and when informed of violations will instruct the Superintendent of the Soo Canal to immediately collect discriminating tolls. No general proclamation or notice will be given.

LONDON, July 30.—Land and Water says the betrothal of the Duke of York, son of the Prince of Wales, and heir presumptive to the British throne, to the Princess May of Teck, who was betrothed to the Duke of Clarence at the time of the latter's death, will be officially announced soon.

Princess Beatrice Narrowly Escapes Death.

BERLIN, July 31.—Princess Beatrice had a narrow escape from fire in the castle at Helligenberg yesterday. Her maid, carrying a candle, approached too near a mosquito net covering the bedstead, setting fire to the net. Princess Beatrice, who was in her bed, hurried out of the room and alarmed the household. A whole wing of the castle was destroyed. Princess Beatrice lost all her jewels and clothes. Two firemen were injured.

The Case of Private Jams.

WHAT THE ENGLISH PAPERS SAY—THE GENERAL AND COLONEL TO BE PROSECUTED.

LONDON, July 28.—All the papers print comments upon the punishment inflicted upon Private Jams, for proposing three cheers for the man who shot and stabbed Frick, of the Carnegie Steel company. All assert that if the colonel of an English regiment had treated a private as Lieutenant Streater ordered Jams to be treated, he would have been court-martialed and dismissed from the service.

The St. James' Gazette regards the incident as an illustration of the ever widening difference between the American and British characters, and says: "The punishment was more merciful than shooting, the fact which Jams deserved. Nevertheless torture is a thing abhorrent to Englishmen."

Boston, July 28.—General Butler, in an interview, expressed himself very forcibly against the recent punishment of Private Jams at Hometown. He said: "The proceeding is barbarous, cruel and unjustifiable by any law in peace or war, and, if it is not, is reprobated so fully and thoroughly by public sentiment that it will never occur again. It will do much to disorganize our state militia and prevent them from coming out when called upon, because no man will voluntarily perform duty where such punishments may follow if he disagrees with his Colonel in political, social, moral or religious sentiments."

"WHAT NEWS?"

An Incident in Mid-Ocean.

Early one morning the mate was startled by the cry from aloft, "Black smoke ahead, sir! A big steamer standing to the southward."

The captain was called and in a trice bounced on deck, where, applying the glass to his eyes, he took a long look at the stranger who had pushed so suddenly out of the early mist hanging low upon the horizon.

Whatever her character, we had but little chance of escape, if she had rifled guns. Many a glance of apprehension was directed toward the sombre hull and pair of sloping smokestacks with the twisting smoke trending far astern.

"Show him our colors, sir! Bead on the ensign; we may as well be hung for a sheep as a lamb. If that fellow is a rebel, the sooner we know it the better!" exclaimed the captain somewhat excitedly to the mate.

It was close upon six bells (seven o'clock) when the steamer revealed her nationality.

We fairly yelled as the blood-red cross of St. George danced up aloft from the steamer's signal-halyards. She was evidently a troop-ship bound for the Cape, a trifle out of her course, but we did not stop to consider that.

She was too far distant to speak, but in obedience to a gesture from the captain, the mate emptied a bag of gaily colored signals on deck, and the boys were called aft to man the halyards and lend a hand to bend on the magic flags. Upwards fluttered the party-colored bits of bunting. Glasses were levelled and breathless expectancy marked the sunburnt features of the clipper's crew; for the enquiry flying from our mizzen-royalmast was, "What news of the American War?"

The flash of "star" came up by the huge propeller greeted our straining vision, the great steamer glided onward, but no responsive signals gladdened the anxious hearts of those yearning to hear news from home.

With a passionate exclamation of disappointment the captain closed the joints of his long glass with a savage snap, saying, as he turned away, "He has no code. It's no use."

"Look at that!" suddenly exclaimed the mate, pointing. "What is he going to do?"

"He is coming about!" shouted the captain, his bronzed features fairly paling. "Can it be possible he has played us a trick and is the Alabama? Stand by, all hands for—"

A deep blast of the steam-whistle rumbled over the flashing waters, followed by a number of quick toots, as the steamer ranged to leeward; then an expanse of white canvas was lowered over the side.

Glasses were directed upon that bright patch amidships, upon which dark lines could be discerned with the naked eye. The glass showed these were letters.

"I have it!" shouted the captain, leaping excitedly into the rigging. "Spread the news fore and aft! It says, 'The American conflict is over! Davis a fugitive'—and what's that? Heavens, no—yes—'Lincoln is killed!'"

"Strike the colors half-mast, sir," continued the captain to the mate, in a subdued tone. Then he added, "Hoist the signal, 'Thank you, to the steamer.'"

At that moment the rich, full tones of a regimental band were wafted across the heaving swells, and many an eye glistened with emotion as the well-known strains of Hail Columbia were faintly heard. The steamer slowly fell off and resumed her course while, as if actuated by one impulse, officers and men sprang into the weather-rigging, giving three times three and waving their hats in return for the kindness of the courteous Englishmen. The Stars and Stripes were dipped three times, the hoarse whistle rang out in return, the "Meteor" flag slowly and majestically returned the salute, and the greeting in mid-ocean was over.

"The commander of the vessel is a gentleman—every inch of him!" was the admiring remark of the mate as he glanced astern at the fast-fading troop-ship.—Captain H. D. Smith, U. S. N., in August St. Nicholas.
