SPECIAL DESPATCHES TO THE EXAMINER.

PARLIAMENT OF CANADA.

Lively Discussion on our Canadian Rights.

Sir Louis Davies in a Snag.

OTTAWA, March 8.—An exciting debate took place in the House of Commons yesterday over the action of the United States Senate in passing a resolution refusing the privilege of bonding goods at Wrangl.

Sir Charles Tupper wanted to know if under the circumstances, the Government would withdraw the Yukon railway bill.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that Canada's right to navigate the Stikkeen carried with it whatever privileges of trans shipment might be expected to give it effect. He regretted the proposed legisla-tion at Washington and hoped it would never receive the signature of the President. He declared that the Government did not intend to surrender any rights, and said that the opposition had no right to condemn the Government for going on with the Yukon Railway project unless they could offer an alternative proposition.

The Opposition leader said that he would do so at once, if the Government will withdraw the present measure. He said: "I undertake, for less money than it is proposed to pay for the hundred and fifty miles of railway, to provide a complete line all the way from the Pacific Coast to Teslin Lake.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said this was not an alternative at all, as the Government proposed to push the road all the way to the coast.

The Premier, however, omitted to state the terms on which the additional hundred and fifty miles would be provided.

Hon. Mr. Foster took up Senator Hansborough's statement as to the prospect of the Canadian Government surrendering the Atlantic fishing rights and showed that it was not surprising that the United States Senator should form that opinion, as it was in line with many speeches made by the present Premier when the late Government was in power.

Sir Louis Davies delivered one of his characteristic speeches. He accused Sir Charles Tupper of disloyalty and declared that he and Foster were asking the Government to surrender everything to the United States.

Before Sir Louis Davies got through he got himself into an awkward scrape. He stated that in 1888 Sir Charles Tupper had administered a severe rebuke to Mr.
Foster and had told him in the House of Commons that his harsh enforcement of the fishery regulations had brought the two nations to the verge of war.

Sir Louis Davies was asked to point out where the speech was reported; but he did not do so though he professed to quote the words.

After some remarks by Mr. Davin and other members, Dr. Montague put Sir Louis to shame by producing the speech which Sir Louis Davies professed to quote, showing that Sir Charles Tupper never mentioned Mr. Foster's administration of the Marine and Fishery Department but to commend him and to justify his course.

Afterwards Sir Louis Davies attempted to get out of the difficulty by reading a sentence in another part of the Tupper speech.
But he had hardly concluded, when Dr.
Montague again arose and showed that Sir Louis Davies had omitted an important sentence in which Sir Charles Tupper declared that Mr. Foster had done exactly right. By this time, Davies had come down from his scolding attitude and had become the subject of amusement to his opponents and amusement to new members on his own side.

At midnight Sir Charles was still speaking on the Yukon Bill, respecting the contract. He said it was drawn with such an utter disregard to the public interests that he would venture to say, subject to Mr.

CAUTIONS.

He walked into the apothecary shop with a hesitating step, and glanced nervously at the rows of bottles with a scared look in his pale blue eyes. After fidgeting about uncertainly for some time, he at last caught the eye of the clerk, and beckoning mysteriously, led the way to a secluded corner by the cigar-case, where the clerk was surprised by finding a trembling forefinger hooked tenaciously into one of his button-holes and an eager face thrust suddenly almost against his.

"What's the matter?" asked the clerk.

"I s'pose you can lay your hand right on the morphine-bottle, can't you?" said the stranger, in an anxious whisper.

"Yes, sir. Certainly," replied the astonished salesman.

"An' I reckon if you was pushed you could find the strychnine in a minute or two?"

"Of course."

"Mebbe the arsenic hasn't got lost or mis-laid clear beyond findin'; if you just had to, has it?"

"Assuredly not."

"An' the sugar of lead bottle couldn't get away from you if it tried?"

"No indeed."

"An' chasin' up the vitriol to its lair would be just play for you?"

"My dear sir, of course I am familiar with all the drugs here."

"S'posin' some of the other fellers had been changin' them around, just as a joke, you know?"

"What do you mean?"

"Suppose the bottles had got mixed?"

"Impossible. Besides, everything is plainly labelled."

"An' there ain't no chance of your palm'in' off prussic-acid for peppermint?"

"Not the slightest."

"Well, I've—half—a—notion—to—risk—it. Yes, you may give me two ounces of peppermint, young man."

A new meat freezing process is being operated in Australia. In the old method of freezing the meat from the outside, the animal heat of the interior is driven inward, being gradually confined in a gradually decreasing space till the temperature of the concentrated heat is such as to cause putrefaction. The new method consists in inserting into the centre of the joint an arrangement which allows cold brine to pass up and down, thus freezing the carcass from the centre outwards.
