

The Daily Examiner AUGUST 15, 1885.

Editorial Notes.

London Truth: The idea that England is one of the most enlightened countries of Europe is a mistake. The little kingdom of Portugal has just been putting us to shame by abolishing its hereditary peers, on the ground that "in a free country the duty of making laws must depend directly or indirectly on the people's will, and cannot be a matter of hereditary descent."

The fair-minded people of the Third Electoral District, Queen's County, are willing to have a free discussion of the Federal Political Questions of the day. They will not, however, organize picnics and invite one-sided Grit ranters to enlighten them, but on the 22nd inst., they will hold a public meeting at Mount Stewart, at which the representatives in the Dominion House of Commons and Local Assembly will be invited to attend and discuss the leading questions of the day on their merits.

The London Times publishes a letter from Meshed, Persia, in which it is stated that the Afghans are acting in such a way as to give the Russians no possible excuse to make any attack. The writer says the Ameer's troops do not pass the frontier which Russia admits is Afghan; that they refrain from moving their troops toward the Russian positions, and even from strengthening their own outposts. The letter also says that the excitement among the Turcomans, which was recently attributed by an English writer to the alleged brutality of the Russian soldiery toward the native women, is really due to the warlike preparations which Russia is making throughout Turcoman territory.

In spite of Sir Charles Dilke's denials, it appears that he is to be made the co-respondent in a crim. con. case, the plaintiff being Mr. Crawford, an officer of the civil service. Mrs. Crawford is a sister of Dilke's brother's wife. The case will, of course, be watched with considerable interest in England, where it is very seldom that so promising a sensation as a Cabinet Minister in the divorce court is to be obtained. However much the general public may enjoy the proceeding of such a trial it may be observed that they visit their displeasure on public men who appear as co-respondents in the Divorce Court. Sir Charles Dilke is already spoken of and pitted as a man lost to public life, and no one seems to question this decision.

The demonstration and the resulting expenditure on the occasion of Gen. Grant's burial has stirred the envy of some other cities, and amongst them Philadelphia, whose equanimity is not proof against the sight of New York pocketing the whole of the money disbursed in consequence of this funeral. A Philadelphia calculator contends that 400,000 persons were carried to New York for the funeral, paying railroad fares to the amount of $2,000,000, the greater part of which finds its way into New York purses. The hotel harvest is estimated by the same calendar at $8,400,000 or $21 per head, and the inference drawn, and, indeed, the belief openly expressed in other quarters, is that New York's great exposition of mourning had a mercantile heaven in it.

The Sultan of Zanzibar was notified on the 13th by Admiral Paschen, commanding the German fleet at Zanzibar, that unless he complied in twenty-four hours with Germany's preliminary demands concerning the possessions claimed in Zanzibar by German subjects, friendly negotiations would be dropped. The Sultan making no reply to the notice within the time specified, Admiral Paschen moved his squadron up in front of the Sultan's palace and took position there. It is thought this demonstration by Germany will have the effect of inducing the Sultan to accede to Germany's demands for amicable settlements of the dispute. A later despatch from Zanzibar states that the dispute between the Sultan and Germany has been adjusted, and the Sultan admits Germany's supremacy in the disputed territory, and promises to withdraw his troops.

Referring to meetings called by the Grit sympathizers of Riel, a correspondent of the Montreal Herald writes: "I was surprised to see that the only flags emanating the speakers stood at the meeting in the Champ de Mars were the tricolor. There was nothing to be seen to indicate that the meeting was called by loyal British subjects or that the audience owed allegiance to Queen Victoria. This is a small matter, but it is not without its significance. But if the conveners did not care to make an ostentatious display of their loyalty they might have given the crowd Riel's own estimate of the worth of his patriotism by displaying a banner on each side of the platform with these words inscribed on it:—

A TRUE PATRIOT, PRICE $35,000.

The crowd would then be able to estimate the worth of the oratory expended in the cause of a "patriot" who valued his patriotism at $100,000, but who was willing to take $35,000. Had Riel been able to get the latter sum from Sir John Macdonald the Northwest rebellion would never have been heard of and the half-breed would have been left to obtain a redress of their grievances in some other way than by force of arms. It is a wonder to me that the remembrance of that $35,000 did not check the flow of the eloquence of some of the speakers. To go in rapturously over the patriotism of a patriot who appraised his own worth at $35,000 seems to me a mighty small business."

Target.

The last match of the Provincial Rifle Association was fired this morning. On the whole the weather was good for shooting and better scores were expected; but the ammunition of Canadian manufacture used at these matches is decidedly poor, and many times the best shots with a good 'pull off' failed to hit. There is a general dissatisfaction in the other provinces as well as here with the ammunition, and it has been decided, we believe, to use the English manufacture at Ottawa this year.

Sapper Milton Davison, of the Ch'town Engineers, obtained the highest aggregate, and the Governor General's Medel. Corp. Gillis, No. 5 Garrison Artillery, obtained the second highest aggregate and barrel of flour.

The following are the scores of the last two matches:— ACTIVE MILITIA NO. 3. (Range, 500 and 600 yards—Highest Possible Score, 70.)

The Indian and Colonial Exhibition

Respecting the Indian and Colonial Exhibition, Sir Charles Tupper says that great interest is taken in it in England, and as a proof of the feeling he says that while Canada voted a guarantee of £10,000 to meet a possible loss, India voted £20,000, and all the other colonies £20,000, in all £50,000. The guarantee fund has already been swolven to £200,000 by the offers of great firms, of noblemen and private gentlemen in England. He had secured 54,000 square feet of space in the exhibition building in Kensington, and expresses himself satisfied that the location secured for Canada is the best in the whole building. The premier colony of the empire will, he thinks, judging from the energy displayed by the Indian portion of the empire and by the other colonies, have all she can do to maintain her pre-eminence, but he knows she can do it, and trusts that she will put forth all her energies to seize this greatest of all opportunities for impressing her greatness and the extent of her resources and her progress in all branches of industry on the people of the United Kingdom and of all other European countries. No doubt Sir Charles enthusiasm will meet with equal enthusiasm and heartiness of response in all parts of Canada. He said that the Canadian exhibition at Antwerp had produced a profound impression on the Belgian mind, and as well upon the Germans, great numbers of whom visited the Canadian section. As an evidence of the high position Canada has taken, Sir Charles stated that a jury of twenty men, representing every nation that took part in the exhibition, passed a resolution to the effect that the exhibition of cereals made by Canada surpassed that of any other nation. By the way, said Sir Charles to a correspondent of the Halifax Herald, I received a cable since landing, stating that His Majesty, the King of the Belgians, desirous of expressing his thanks to Canada, had written, asking him, as the representative of Canada, to accept the grand cordon of the order of King Leopold. Reverting to the Indian and Colonial exhibition, Sir Charles stated that George Stephens, who leaves England, has promised to do his very best on behalf of Canada to aid in making the Canadian part of the exhibition a grand success.

RIEL'S CASE.—At a meeting at St. Louis, Montreal, on the 18th inst., called to discuss the Riel matter, a petition was adopted asking for a commission to examine into Riel's mental condition. A number of the chief organizers of Sunday's meeting at Champ de Mars, attended the meeting on the 18th armed with the resolutions passed at Sunday's meeting, but they were voted down by a large majority. M. Desjardins, M. P., French Liberal Conservative, who addressed the meeting, deprecated the fact that some French Canadians were trying to make this a national question, and warned them to be careful in the matter.

The British Navy.

SOME OF ITS WEAK POINTS EXPOSED ENGLISH VS. FRENCH SHIPS.

Lord Charles Beresford, himself a distinguished officer of the navy, in a recent speech in London, made some startling statements concerning defects in the British naval system. After urging that the efficiency of the navy should not become a party question, as quoted in the Pall Mall Gazette, he went on to say: "Both parties have been to blame in this matter. We have not enough ships. Our fleet at present is barely sufficient to be able to defend itself and our arsenals against an attack of any single European power but most notably the French. We have got muzzled loading guns. We have an enormous percentage of non-combatants among our sailors. We have no stores of modern war materials; our coaling stations are almost undefended, and have positively done little or nothing for the defence of our great mercantile marine, which at present not only does the carrying power of the world, but, in fact, supplies this kingdom with bread and meat. We have statistics on paper occasionally brought before us as to the relative numbers of the French and the English fleets, but if I were commander-in-chief of the British navy—you may take my opinion for what it is worth, I can but give it—and had to fight a naval battle for England, I would rather take a fleet composed of French vessels into action than their sister ships in the British navy, because the French ships are better all around than the English, and their heavy ships are almost equal in number to our English fleet, while their light ships and small craft are far superior to ours. That no naval officer can deny. In war the commerce and the food carrying done for this country must be accomplished by fast-going ocean steamers. We shall not be able to spare men of war for convoy work. These ocean steamers ought, therefore, to be armed with guns to defend themselves against the enemy's cruisers. It seems incredible, but it is true, that although we have many splendid ocean steamers, which, by power, speed and coal carrying capacity would be well able to cope with an enemy's cruiser, still there are positively no guns of a modern class in the country to put on board of them. It is said, 'Oh, British pluck will pull you through'; but British pluck in such a contest would go to the bottom. The few steamers we have taken up and armed have the old sixty-four pounder placed on board of them—a gun perfectly useless against those which a cruiser would have if belonging to France, Russia, Germany, Italy, or even Chile. The navy must be made efficient without further delay at any cost; and to do this without making the tax come too heavy on the people I would propose raising a loan of twenty millions, which I believe is the lowest sum which would prevent grave disaster to this country, should, unfortunately, war arise within the next two years."

The Plague in England.— Since the case of cholera at Bristol, cabled on Friday, no little anxiety has been felt in London. On the 11th orders were forwarded to Marseilles that all British bound vessels leaving it must undergo four days' quarantine. The London Lancet has a significant editorial referring to foreign cholera, and calling attention to the increasing number of fatal cases of diarrhoea as the precursor of cholera. The Lancet has obtained official figures for the week ending August 1. Taking London and twenty-eight English towns, with an aggregate population of nine millions, there were 547 deaths from diarrhoeal diseases in the last week of July, against 31 in the last week in May. There was also a total of 409 cases from then up to the end of the third week in July. In London the rate was 4.4 annually in every thousand inhabitants. Nevertheless, by comparison with similar periods of preceding years, the Lancet concludes that this diarrhoeal mortality, considering the drought and the high temperature, is satisfactorily low. The London death office always returns cholera morbus as cholera, and this sometimes alarms those not estimating the meaning of the technical expression use there. Medical experts, however, claim that full precautions exist against the introduction and dissemination of cholera there, but the Evening Standard, commenting on the subject says:—"Indeed, so long as our river is a gigantic cesspool, our state will be a perilous one."

A New Suspension Bridge.

The suspension bridge which the Queen has caused to be placed over the Dee at Aberfeldie Castle is now completed. It has a span of 145 feet, and will bear a weight of sixty tons. The bridge replaces the old rope and cradle, which have hitherto been the only means of crossing the river between Ballater and Balmoral, and which was dear to the aboriginal inhabitants of Deeside from the romantic legend associated with it. According to the old tale, a bride and bridegroom were crossing the Dee in the cradle when, just as they reached the middle of the river, a disappointed lover of this "fair maid" of Crathie, who had concealed himself on the opposite side, cut the rope, and the couple were dashed into the stream and drowned.

An old maid died recently in Norway leaving a will in which she directed that her estate be divided into six equal parts, and distributed to her six disaffected lovers, who are all poor. In explanation of this bequest, the deceased left the following upon record:—"These lovers either courted me for my money; which they may now have, or else they have loved me; and for that reason they shall have the money, because I disbelieved them."

In the last century the population of Europe has increased from 145,000,000 to 350,000,000. The increase in England has been five-fold; in Russia, four-fold; in Germany less than three-fold, while in France and Spain the increase has been only about fifty per cent. In the chess tournament now in progress at Hamburg, Mr. James Mason, the American player, had a good chance to be second to Mr. Gunsburg, the probable winner of the first prize, while Capt. Mackenzie, of New York, bids, fair, so far, to lead the rest of the field.
