FOUND AT LAST.

A REAL CURE FOR KLEPTOMANIA.

Dr. Bertillon, the Famous French Savant, Finds a Genuine Remedy for the Dreadful Disease of Theft.

A cure for kleptomania has just been announced by Dr. Bertillon, the eminent French physician and scientist, who invented the system of measurements recently adopted at Sing Sing Prison.

Dr. Bertillon, in the course of his experiments, has discovered that by hypnotic suggestion the incipient or chronic thief may be alienated from his tendency. The doctor holds that crime is a disease, to be treated scientifically and accord ng to its progress in the patient.

Microbes of crime, he insists, may permeate a man's system in the same manner as those of consumption, malaria or erysipelas.

His first experiment was upon a little girl five years of age, whose mania consisted in the stealing of spools of embroidery silks from her mother. Corrected for her behavior, the child would invariably promise not to repeat the offence, yet in spite of frequent punishment she would take the spools at every opportunity.

Curiously enough, her mania did not extend to the taking of other articles, such as would be appropriated by the ordinary kleptomaniac. Being a friend of the family, Dr. Bertillon became interested in the unique case, and frequently remonstrated with the child. He suggested to her mother the possible effect of hypnotism. The mother consented, and the child was subjected to the experiment.

"Why do you take the silk spools?" asked the doctor when he had her under control.

The child replied that she could not help doing so, although conscious that she was doing wrong.

When the child's arms had become rigid through hypnotism he placed several of the gayly colored spools on a table and commanded her to take them. The child made a futile effort to do so. "Now you may take them!" exclaimed the doctor, and the child immediately did so.

"Now you are to return them in the order in which you took them," commanded the doctor. This the little one did mechanically. "And you are to remember," continued the doctor, "that whenever you feel that you must take the spools you must return them, every one. So you will always return what you take in the future."

A few days following this experiment, when the spools were again missing, the child's mother said nothing, awaiting results. The next day the spools were found in the work-basket, from which they had been taken. After this the mother had no further trouble with the child.

Another interesting patient was a youth afflicted with nervous prostration, the result of excessive smoking.

It was this youth's habit to smoke from fifteen to twenty cigars a day. Placed under hypnotic influence, a cigar made of chopped hay and saturated with chemicals was given to him. The disagreeable flavor produced nausea, and the young man threw aside the cigar in disgust.

"Cigars do not agree with you," exclaimed the doctor. "You will be made ill every time you smoke them in future."

Several nights later, at a dinner party, the subject was given a cigar. He lit it and began smoking. Presently he became deathly pale, and was seized with nausea, although his cigar was of the finest tobacco Following this incident, he was cured of the habit and in a few weeks restored to health.

A young girl suffering from a dyspeptic ailment was the next to undergo this treatment. Her habit was the incessant biting of her finger-nails, a practice productive of blood-poisoning. Apparently she had no control over this desire that had gradually induced a general debilitation of the nervous system. While under hypnotic influence she was told that her nails had been steeped in alum, that it would irritate her mouth and cause it to water. Although nothing was placed upon her nails to produce this effect, the moment she began to bite them her mouth watered, her lips contracted and she exhibited all the symptoms described.

The doctor has under treatment at present two wealthy women, victims of kleptomania, which affliction has been a source of much chagrin as well as expense to their families.

The one is a young girl of high social standing, who stole from the various shops articles for which she had no possible use, such as clothes wringers, a rolling pin and several flat irons.

Another case is that of a highly respectable woman who stole expensive mechanical toys, although she had no children upon whom to bestow her plunder. Cases of kleptomania are much more numerous than generally supposed.

In this city there are a score or more women of means who surreptitiously take from the large shops whatever seizes their fancy.

In most of these instances nothing is said about the matter, the articles taken being charged on the bills of the delinquents, and invariably paid without protest by the relatives, who thus avoid publicity.

Now that Dr. Bertillon's discovery has proven successful in the treatment of kleptomania, it is not improbable that these well bred offenders will be subjected to a similar treatment at the hands of their respective family physicians.—N. Y. World.

A Hundred Miles an Hour by Electric Car.

An electrical engineer has been exhibiting in London the model of his proposed single rail electric line for speeds of 150 miles an hour. The rail is fixed on a V-shaped trestle, and runs up into the body of the car, which as it were, runs astride on it. The car runs on twelve bearing wheels and seats 135 passengers, with space for their baggage. One of the difficulties met with in schemes for excessively high-speed travel is the tendency of the car to run off the track. By running the rail within the car the lateral tendency of the train is overcome. But in this late scheme the great difficulty seems to be the passenger. What would happen to the passenger while the train took a sharp curve while going at 150 miles an hour is not explained.

DISTURBED HER NAP.

How a Scotch Minister Rudely Called His Wife to an Accounting.

A minister named Pettigrew who, on asking why his flock were so regardless of his exhortation to them to remain awake during the sermons, was told that his own wife set the example, but as she sat below the pulpit she was out of the minister's sight. On this it was arranged that on the following Sunday the informant should hold up his finger when Mrs. Pettigrew succumbed to Morpheus.

The preacher bent forward and saw his consort enjoying a snug nap. With a tremendous blow on the pulpit he aroused her from her slumber, and as the lady, who, according to the legend, was destitute of both fortune and beauty, looked up, he addressed her in accents of wrath: "Sit ye up there, Jean Pettigrew! Ye are na bonnie; I gat nae tocher wi' ye, and gin ye hae na heavenly grace about ye I hae gotten an unca bad bargain o' ye!"—Pittsburg Dispatch.

THE STRONGEST SENSE.

In Old Age It Is the Last to Be Impaired.

The sense of touch is least impaired by old age. The eye is the first sense to become impaired by old age, and the sense of touch to a great measure takes its place, so that it is not at all an uncommon thing for an old man whose sight has become defective to be able to recognize different coins and other small articles by the sense of touch alone, while a younger man is quite unable to do so. Rough work impairs the tactile sensibility of the hands, but with only light employment they retain their sense of touch almost unimpaired to extreme old age. The sense of taste is probably the next persistent, for although it is generally blunted by age, yet it is not at all uncommon for the old to have a keen relish for the most dainty flavors. The sense of smell comes third, but taste and smell are so nearly allied that it is not easy to separate.

A Barber Bird.

Man has a rival in the art of shaving in a South American bird called the "motmot," which actually begins shaving on arriving at maturity. Naturally adorned with long blue tail feathers, it is not satisfied with them in their natural state, but with its beak nips off the web on each side for a little oval tuft at the end of each.

The London Chronicle publishes a despatch from Berlin saying that the Russian Black Sea fleet is cruising 45 miles northeast of the Bosphorous, and that it is in constant communication with the lighthouse at Killa, 30 miles east of the Bosphorous.

LORD NELSON'S ROMANCE.

Married to a Widow in India, but Separated by Intrigues.

The recent sale in London of some relics of Lord Nelson, the great sea captain, hero of the battle of the Nile, Trafalgar and scores of other naval victories, has drawn attention to the fact that one of the most eventful episodes of his life occurred in one of the obscure islands of the West Indies.

In 1782 Horatio Nelson, then but 24 years old, was appointed to the command of one of his Majesty's ships, and sent to New York. The Commander-in-chief, Admiral Digby, congratulated him upon this appointment to a station where large sums of prize money were to be obtained, but the young captain replied:—

"Yes, sir; but I prefer the West Indies as the station of honor."

He was, though unwittingly, taken at his word, and sent to the West Indies, where he became acquainted with the best people of those hospitable islands. Two years later, having made several voyages and acquired the confidence of his sovereign, Nelson wa again appointed to the West Indies as commander of the twenty-eight-gun frigate, the Boreas, sailing from Spithead the 9th of May, 1784. He carried with him the Rear Admiral of the fleet, Sir Richard Hughes, and his family, and after their transfer assumed charge of the squadron assembled at Nevis. This island was then a prosperous sugar producing colony of Great Britain, and lies near the more famous island of St. Kitts. Between the two islands the Boreas cruised continually, with occasional trips along the lesser Antilles, constantly on the watch against the aggressions of Britain's arch enemies, the French.

It was during this West Indian voyage that he met and won the fair widow Nisbit, relict of a resident physician who had practiced in Nevis. They were married, as the register of Figtree Church affirms, on the 11th of March, 1787. The marriage register is still in evidence, though the leaves of the old book are tattered and worn, and can be seen by visitors to the Island of Nevis. The entry is as follows:—

"1787, March 11, Horatio Nelson, Esq., Captain of her Majesty's ship, the Boreas, to Frances Herbert Nisbit, widow."

That is all. The unknown recorder of this affair could not peer into the future and perceive that he was then in the presence of England's greatest captain, for the young man had not then won his successive titles of Baron Nelson of the Nile, Duke of Bronte, etc. He was plain Horatio Nelson, Esq., but doubtless considered a good catch by a West India widow of little means and with a family. Prince William Henry, then captain of the Pegasus, later the sailor King of England—William IV.—graced the occasion of the marriage with his presence, and gave away the bride.

That Nelson was for a time attached to his wife and was kind to her son is shown by his future acts, for ten years later, after he had been created a Rear Admiral, and when he thought his end was nigh, he wrote in a letter to Lord Vincent, his superior commander: "I have only to recommend Josiah Nisbit to you and my country." It was when Nelson had been shot in the elbow, receiving a wound that lost to him his arm, and placed him in imminent danger of dying, that Lieut. Nisbit, his stepson, who was by his father's side when he fell, placed him tenderly in the bottom of the boat, and, noticing that the sight of blood made him faint as it spouted from the shattered arm, covered it with his hat. He then, at the peril of his life, had Nelson taken on board one of the ships in face of a desultory fire from the enemy and took some silk handkerchiefs from his neck and bound them tightly about the lacerated arm, thus saving his father's life.

This was at Teneriffe. Nelson was taken home to England, still in charge of his stepson, where he was placed in the tender care of his devoted wife, who nursed him back to health. And yet, a little more than a year later, the hero of many a fight was the devoted admirer of Lady Hamilton, with whose name his own had been coupled to their discredit. Writing to his wife at the time, Nelson says: "The grand seignior has ordered me a valuable diamond. If it were worth a million my pleasure would be to see it in your possession. My pride is in being your husband, the son of my dear father, and in having Sir William and Lady Hamilton for my friends." Within two years Lord Nelson and his wife were separated.

Nelson's fame had penetrated to the remotest regions of the earth, but in that lonely West Indian isle, were, in 1787, he "gave hostages to fortune," we find the chronicle of one of the most important events of his life in tatters and the house where the ceremony was celebrated falling into ruin, scarcely more than its fallen walls remaining.

Not So Bad.

He was tarred and feathered from head to feet,
But growled he never a word,
For he looked at his feathery coat complete
And cackled, "I feel like a bird!"
