B.C. Cabinet Faces Demands To Quit

VANCOUVER, April 2—The British Columbia Coalition Government, headed by a Liberal, faced a barrage of demands recently that it resign.

Its hospital insurance scheme, which has lost millions of dollars in two years of operation, is main target of attack. Its Labor Act also comes in for criticism. Province-wide protest followed an increase in the hospital service plan rates—from $33 to $42 a year for married persons and from $21 to $30 for single. Other changes were made, including a co-insurance clause calling for payment of $2 to $3.50 a day up to 10 days on top of hospital insurance premiums.

Premier Byron Johnston, provincial Liberal leader, has remained silent. Other Government leaders had no comment.

Political observers in Victoria feel there is little likelihood of the Government resigning and calling an election.

Such action at a time when the administration is under fire would be unprecedented in B.C. political history.

The coalition of Liberals and Progressives Conservatives was formed in 1941, a move to keep the then-powerful C.C.F. now the official Opposition, from office. Premier Johnston has headed the Government since 1949.

Finance Minister Herbert Anscomb is Progressive Conservative leader, staunch supporter of the hospital insurance scheme.

A late development was announced from the Liberal Party president, Harry Perry of Prince George, that he plans a meeting of the Liberal Advisory Committee to consider "the dangerous state of the party's affairs."

The committee includes Liberal representatives in the House of Commons and the Provincial Legislature.

He said a provincial convention could be called "if the demand is strong enough."

The annual Red Cross drive is now being carried on. Canvassers are on their way. It is hoped that everybody will treat these workers with courtesy as they are volunteers and are giving their time and energy to solicit donations from the public. It is felt that everybody knows the valuable work being done by the Red Cross in many fields and the campaign is operating with the slogan, "Give Till It Hurts."

Miss Velda Green was hostess to the Young People's Society on Friday evening, March the 16th. More coat hooks for the boys' clothes were reported needed at school. The sick committee reported one sick call made, and a treat taken.

Two crockinole parties were held during the month, which were very successful, financially as well as socially. Collection amounted to 30 cents.

The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Roy Campbell, with Mrs. Edgar Doull preparing the programs.

Letters of thanks were received from those receiving fruit in the past month, also cards thanking for cards of sympathy. A card of sympathy has been sent to a member.

Correspondence was read by the secretary and the secretary was asked to get another bottle of cod liver oil tablets by the next meeting. The roll call is to be answered by each member bringing a get-well card or sympathy card.

Next meeting to be held in school. Meeting closed with the Lord's Prayer. Bingo was enjoyed by the members. A delicious lunch was served by the hostess.

VATICAN CITY, March 30 — (Reuters)—Rev. Gerolamo Bianchi, 81, secretary to the late Pope Pius X and Benedict XV, died Good Friday near Florence. It was learned today. He spent the last 25 years in a monastery cell.
