Since, in practice, declarer does not see the defender's cards, the best he can do is follow the method of play that has the best chance to succeed. In some cases, he cannot possibly make the contract, regardless of what he does, because the opponents' cards are so constituted that he cannot control the result. Thus, if we exchange the East and West hands, South must go down. The proper approach to the play of this hand is to lead a heart at trick two, not a trump. The finesse is taken. If the finesse fails, which will occur about half the time, the only remaining hope is to avoid the loss of a trump trick. By far the best chance then to make the slam is to lead the spade ace, trusting it will bring forth the king. Suppose the heart finesse at trick two succeeds. Now declarer has a sure thing going for him. All he has to do is make certain he does not lose two trump tricks. This can be easily accomplished by entering dummy to lead a low spade. South adjusts his play to what ever card East plays. If East shows out of spades, declarer takes the ace and returns a spade. If East follows suit with a spade honor, South takes the ace. If East follows suit with the three, South finesses, thus assuring the loss of only one trump trick.

CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
