Mr. Parnell's Birthday.

THE IRISH LEADER REVIEWS HIS PARTY'S WORK IN PARLIAMENT—THE HARVEST NOT FAR OFF.

A late London despatch says:—Mr. Parnell was 44 years old yesterday, and in honor of the occasion a grand banquet was given in the evening at the National Liberal Club. Covers were laid for seventy guests. Justin McCarthy presided. Mr. Parnell, responding to a toast to his health, eulogized Mr. McCarthy as the beau ideal of an Irish member, to whom he could wish no future dearer to his heart than to enter soon with himself the portals of a parliament on College Green. He congratulated his hearers upon the Gladstone alliance, and expatiated upon the constitutional policy of the Irish party. There was a time in the parliamentary history of Ireland, he said, when traitors throve and prospered. Now, with a perfect franchise which Ireland knew how to use, no Irishman, however great his services, could attempt to betray his country with any hope of success. Nor could the government bribe either Ireland or her members. If they bribe the latter, tomorrow they would find a fresh crop equally unpurchaseable. (Laughter). He claimed for the Parnellites the credit for the present disorganized condition of the government, and for the great change that had been wrought in English opinion regarding Ireland. He excused the Irish members who were absent at the recent critical division on the ground that it was as much of a surprise to them as to the Conservatives. It would have been useless to issue a whip because it was a notorious fact that the government opened all the Irish members' letters, and a whip would thus have defeated its own object. Nevertheless it was worthy of remark that the Parnellites were present in greater strength than any other party. It would be unjust on his part to withhold his testimony as to the manner in which the members of the Irish party had uncomplainingly performed their duty for the past five years. He was convinced that they had not much longer to wait for the harvest. The government would continue for a time to drag out a wretched and feeble existence, diminishing the possibility of a life hereafter. Whatever they attempted, he saw no hope for them but extinction. Therefore the prospects of Ireland were bright in the hands of Mr. Gladstone. The members of the Irish party would accept no office unless conferred by their fellow-countrymen. In conclusion he proposed a toast to Chairman McCarthy.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used by mothers for children teething for over fifty years with perfect success. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain; and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. ap18'90dyeodwkyly

A Terrible Oil Explosion.

FIVE ACRES OF GROUND AND BUILDINGS IN FLAMES IN LOUISVILLE.

Five acres of fire was the awful sight witnessed at the Standard Oil Refinery at Fifth and C. Streets, Louisville, Ky., on Monday morning last. The immense structure was blazing at every point, and the heat was so intense that even at 200 yards persons were overcome. It was first reported that seven persons had lost their lives, and later that three were killed and thirty-five wounded, but it is now believed that only seven were injured, two fatally. The fire broke out at 8 45 o'clock. The Refinery is on the east side of the Louisville and Nashville railway, but the tanks are scattered along it on both sides. On Saturday a tank of crude oil came in on a flat car from Cleveland, and it was to be turned into the refinery vats. Some of the workmen thought the iron was too hot. After consultation it was postponed in the hope that the tank would be cooler. It did not prove to be, however, and it became necessary to run the oil out of the tank into another in the yard. Inspector Keene took John Pittig and another workman with him and they climbed on the car. They were about to unscrew the cap when they felt there was a tremendous pressure from the inside against the head. At first they decided not to open it. Finally they opened it. In an instant there was a dull puff as the vapor escaping, filled the air all around. The gas, as is known, is heavier than the air, and it sank to the ground, spreading out all over the locality and moving with the wind. Almost in a twinkling it reached one of the sheds, under which there was a fire. There was a flash as the inflammable vapor ignited and immediately after there was a tremendous explosion. The tank was blown into pieces and hundreds of gallons of burning oil was spattered all over the great works. A wall of fire 300 feet high and nearly 900 feet long moved with lightning rapidity to the building. In less time than it takes to relate the storehouses, filled with thousands of gallons of canned oil, the cooper shop, carpenter shop, pump and engine houses, the filling and lubricating house, the storage house, the paint and glue houses and 900 feet of platform were all ablaze and burning furiously. At the first intimation of the explosion all of the workmen who could do so started to run. Johnnie Kline, however, stumbled and fell and his clothes caught fire. The men bravely returned to his assistance, but the fire that enveloped him could not be extinguished until he had been frightfully burned. Three little boys, Danny O'Neill and Andrew and John McDonald, were on the railroad track when the explosion occurred. They were slightly to the east of the tank and the wind blew the blaze down upon them. Shrieking with pain they impulsively jumped backward and into the clear place on the western side of the track with the bright blazes streaming upon them. The bystanders soon extinguished the flames and laid the boys under a tree. When an attempt was made to remove O'Neill's clothes a great piece of flesh peeled off his face and body at the slightest touch. He was unconscious and never uttered a cry. The loss on buildings and stock is about $40,000.
