OLD AGE OF INDIANS.

Defying All Rules of Health They Keep Well and Strong.

The Remarkable Longevity of the Indian Race Explained.—For Every Human Ill They Have a Cure—They Know Where to Find the Roots, Herbs and Barks that will keep them in Good Health—The Secret Now Given to the World.

Laughing Dog. Age 105 Yrs.

Indians are long lived.

There are many Kickapoos now living who have trod parts of this vast continent long before white men ever set his foot on the soil of their vast domain. Their lives have been spent with nature. Born to good health, as the saying goes, they keep it.

Think how they live, eat, sleep, travel about, exposed to climatic changes, poisonous night airs, damp sleeping places, food half cooked, and eaten with utter disregard of all common rules of health. Yet, look at them! Pictures of health.

Chronic Rheumatism? Never. Malaria and Chills? Very rarely. Indigestion? Occasional symptoms perhaps, but Chronic Dyspepsia, utterly unheard of. While any of the numerous afflictions of the liver, kidneys or bladder, so frequently found among the whites, is rarely heard of among the Indians.

Why is it?

For centuries these children of nature have studied her ways. For centuries they have known where to look in the forest and field for a certain cure for the ills which arise from the disobedience of nature's laws. At the first sign, the first symptoms of sickness, they resort to their "Sagwa"—the most potent, remedial combination of roots and herbs known to the Indian or any other race.

A combination so valuable that the learned professor of Physiological Chemistry at Yale college commended it, and could offer no suggestions.

Science surpassed by Indian craft! Nature undefiled by mineral poisons.

Indians are subject to ills of the flesh, but they have a remedy for all.

Kickapoo Indian Cough Cure breaks up their colds and stops their coughs. Kickapoo Indian Worm Killer keeps their children free from these troubles; and Kickapoo Indian Oil arrests croup, allays pain, heals bruises, and quickly kills all pains; Kickapoo Indian Salve heals, wounds, cuts, abrasions of the skin, humors, eczema, etc.

These remedies are now sold by every druggist in the land, and their best proof of genuine worth is in the fact that on their merit solely they have achieved this sale within a few short years. Ask for them at the Trading Post on the Frontier, and you'll find them there. Go into the fashionable drug stores of New York City, and these remedies of the Indians are to be bought. Everywhere, high and low, they have made friends by their intrinsic value. Sold by Druggists and Dealers.

Afraid of the Moon. Age 117 Yrs.

THE FARMER AND FREE TRADE.

[The North Sydney Herald.]

A good illustration of the methods of campaign adopted by orators of the grit persuasion, who for some weeks past have been doing missionary work in the farming districts of this province, will be found in the following: "During the last presidential contest in the United States a democratic orator visited a farming district where he found by appointment a representative audience waiting to hear him elaborate on the benefits which would accrue to the farmers under a democratic administration and a free trade policy. The democratic orator among other things told the farmers that under free trade they would realize on their wool 34 cents per pound instead of 22 cents as they were then receiving. In the audience was a pronounced republican farmer who had stood by the republican party and protection for many years. He returned home and told his wife what the orator had said about wool, and having 268 sheep he concluded to give free trade a trial, and when election day came around voted the democratic ticket. His conversion to free trade caused some comment in the community and the democrats used his name to show how the intelligent farmers were tiring of protection and the republican party.

As is well known, the promised change from protection to free trade caused depression throughout Uncle Sam's domain. Factories closed and farming products of all kinds tumbled in price, so that instead of wool advancing from 22 cents per pound to 34 cents as promised by the democratic orator, it tumbled to 11 cents per pound. The farmer who was converted to free trade principles brought his wool to market in July last and realized 11 cents per pound only. He was utterly disgusted, and this the buyer perceived, as he remarked wool was very low. 'Well, yes said the farmer, 'I am aware of the fact, sir. You heard I voted the democratic ticket and free trade last election.' 'Oh, yes,' remarked the wool dealer, 'I was pleased to hear that you came over to our principles.' 'Well, yes, I did go over to somebody's principles last election, and this year I had my 268 sheep sheared from the tail up instead of from the head down, as is usually the custom.' 'Indeed, remarked the buyer, 'why did you shear your sheep that way?' Well, because, mister, since I made the tarnation mistake of voting for the Democrats and free trade, I sheared my sheep from the tail up because I could not look them sheep in the face.'"

It may not be that any of the Nova Scotia farmers who are to-day listening to grit orators elaborating on the advantages of free trade will be as gullible as the Yankee farmer was, and therefore will not have to shear their sheep from the tail up. Where the policy of free trade is practised it is the same old story. Take the case of the British farmer for instance. Going back twenty years we find that in 1873 there were no fewer that 201,281 more farmers in England and Wales alone than there are at the present day. That is to say, one out of every five men who in 1873 worked upon and lived by the land has gone from it. This fact of itself is a sufficient answer to the question, "Is free trade likely to benefit our farmers?" Again in 1873 the number of acres devoted to wheat was 2,490,380; at present it is 1,897,488, or a decrease of 1,592,892 acres in twenty years. In 1873 the barley crop covered 2,335,913 acres; at present the area covered is only 2,076,097 acres, a decrease of 259,316 acres in the same period. The area of oats, indeed, has been increased by 495,562 acres, but allowing for this we have a decrease in the area devoted to these three important crops of 1,357,179 acres since 1873. Nor is this an isolated case. Live stock shows a similar condition of affairs. In 1873 there were 28,427,635 head of sheep on the farms of Great Britain; at present there are only 27,230,334, a decrease of over a million. 2,500,259 pigs were kept in 1873; at present there are only 2,113,530, a decrease of 386,729. Cattle alone show an increase of 836,127. Thus it will be seen that, with the exception of small increases in oats and cattle, there has been a decrease all round in the principal crops of the country. During the last few years the decrease has been more marked. In 1891 there were 2,307,277 acres devoted to the production of wheat; in 1892 this had decreased to 2,219,838 acres, and now there are only 1,897,488 acres as mentioned above, a decrease in two years of 409,789, or 17.8 per cent. 2,112,793 acres were devoted to barley in 1891; in 1892 there were only 2,036,810, and now there are 2,076,097, a difference in two years of 37,701, or 1.9 per cent. Potatoes in 1891 covered 532,794 acres, and at present only 527,821 acres are devoted to this important crop, a decrease of 4,973 acres. Cattle which in the whole twenty years show an increase, have decreased in the last two years by 152,154 head, or 2.2 per cent. Sheep and lambs have decreased since 1891 by 1,452,224, or 5.1 per cent. Pigs have decreased in the same period by 775,243, or 26.8 per cent. Prices have likewise suffered. In 1873 the farmer received for his wheat 61s. per quarter; at the present time he receives only 25s. 11d., a decrease in value of 36s. 1d. For barley he received in 1873 45s.; now he receives 26s. 9d., a decrease in value of 18s. 2d. per quarter. For oats he receives 7s. 6d.; less per quarter than he did twenty years ago, the figures standing 26s. against 18s. 6d.

This is the showing made by the farmers who have ready access to the greatest market in the world for agricultural products under free trade. What reason have Canadian farmers for expecting a different result should they listen to the grit leaders and adopt their cure all for the real or imaginary evils with which this country is afflicted.

The Cruel Calculi.

Drop a postal card to Mr. George Rose, of Peterborough, and ask him what Membray's Kidney and Liver Cure did for him in relieving him of the intense pain caused by the passage of stone or calculi from the bladder. Hypodermic injections had to be resorted to in order to relive the agonizing pains at times, but the use of Membray's Kidney and Liver Cure enabled the kidneys to wash out the sand and debris from the system, and neutralized the acid formations. .....

ENGLAND'S NEXT WAR.

Great Britain is likely to be involved, at no distant date, in a South African war, not second in importance to that which resulted in the subjection of the Zulus. The nation which has provoked British hostility is a branch of the Zulu race, fully as warlike and aggressive as were the followers of Cetewayo. Nearly eighty years ago the Matabele severed themselves from the other Zulus, and have ever since lived at the expense of their other neighbors. Under their leader, Mo elekatze, father and predecessor of Lobengula, the Matabele sought refuge to the north of the Dimpopo River. There they found the Mashonas an easy prey, and the race which asserted its superiority has continued to treat the conquered people as slaves and to make raids upon them at its will.

The Advent of the British South Africa Company introduced a new order of things. Protection was promised to the natives within the company's territories. The Mashonas were induced by this promise to become faithful servants and laborers for the British settlers, much to the irritation of the Matabele. It is apparent that Lobengula, the Matabele king, is being urged on by the younger and more warlike members of his tribe to take a hostile stand toward the British, and all the signpoint to an early collision. The Matabele army is well organized and numbers about 45,000 men divided into kraals or regiments, and commanded by Indunas. The area of Matabeland and its dependencies is about 125,000 square miles, and the population of Matabeland proper is estimated at 200,000. The subjection of the Matabele would therefore be a most formidable undertaking for the British South Africa Company, which, counting every able bodied man, could not bring a force of over 1,500 into active service. It is difficult to see how England can avoid being drawn into conflict, which will probably be the final encounter between civilization and the native power in South Africa.

LITERARY NOTES.

Frank R. Stockton has written the history of "How I Wrote 'The Lady, or the Tiger'?" for the next issue of the Ladies' Home Journal, and tells what came of the writing of the famous story and the condition of his own mind at the present time, of the correct solution of the problem whether the lady or the tiger came out of the opened door.

The second edition of the Cosmopolitan for September brought the total edition up to 211,000 copies, without doubt the largest edition of any magazine in the world for this month. It remained for the Cosmopolitan to have the World's Fair treated in a single number by twelve different writers. As the exposition of 1893 must remain one of the leading events in the history of the United States, the most distinguished men were asked to prepare this magazine volume, which is destined to become valuable as one of the most perfect descriptions of the World's Fair. Among the number of those who contribute are our only ex-president, Walter Besant, the most distinguished of the English literary men who visited the exposition, and a host of others. Besides the usual fiction, including a story by Mark Twain, entitled, "Is He Living or is He Dead," and the regular departments, the Cosmopolitan contains nearly one hundred illustrations devoted to the World's Fair, including eleven full pages. It is pronounced one of the most remarkable of the publications yet issued regarding the fair. It is a completely illustrated guide or souvenir, as one prefers to call it, by the most famous writers of the day, put before the reader at the price of 12½ cents, and more than the equal of the books of the Fair which sell for seventy-five cents and one dollar.

The Icelandic settlements in Manitoba disclose a translation of young and old from the firesides of Iceland with all the features of home life in the oldest civilization of Europe. At Tiger Hill sheep raising is attended to with time-honored preeminence. When the flocks are sheared and the wool properly prepared and carded, the hum of the spinning wheels, brought all the way from the far-off island, are heard. The thick woolen stockings are all knit by hand, and so is the warm, heavy homespun from which the men's clothes are made. Everything worn by the women of the settlement is home-made. The product of the hand looms is highly praised.

Oriental visitors at Chicago must be struck with the newness of everything in Chicago. Eastern cities have an air of antiquity about them. "In Damascus you feel as if you are carried back to the days of the Patriarchs, and nothing has any interest for you less than 5,000 years old. In Cairo you can only think of the Pharaohs, and when you are in Rome you are carried back to the days of the Cæsars. In Athens you can only interest yourself in the spoils of Thermopylæ and Marathon, and visit the hill of the Pnyx, where Demosthenes spoke, and the Areopagus, where Paul preached," but in the magnificent metropolis of the great western plains everything is but of yesterday.

There can be no doubt about the oratorical abilities of the German Emperor. We can imagine how words like the following, addressed to a delegation of the authorities along the Rhine, would stir the hearts of the loyal Germans:

"On these shores of the Rhine, enfolded in a web of Sagas, filled with historical recollections, where every mountain has its message for us, and every house of God speaks to us in its own sublime language, every reception, every spoken word must cast a spell upon the human heart. All here is glorified by the charm of poetry, but this above all applies to the city of Coblenz, which is so singularly rich in memories of an historical and personal nature. . . . I hope, then, that with steadfast fidelity on the part of the Rhineland towards me, and with loyalty on my own part towards my Rhinelanders, we may be permitted to go forward in our allotted paths for the welfare of the Rhineland and our united, great and well-loved German Fatherland."

The Ladies Delighted.

The pleasant effect and the perfect safety with which ladies may use the liquid fruit laxative, Syrup of Figs, under all conditions make it their favorite remedy. It is pleasing to the eye and to the taste, gentle, yet effectual in acting on the kidneys, liver and bowels. .....

With Invalids.

Yes! with invalids the appetite is capricious and needs coaxing, that is just the reason they improve so rapidly under Scott's Emulsion, which is as palatable as cream. .....

Beer & Goff have bought from Mr. Dillon the whole of the fine exhibit of Island factory cheese, which attracted so much attention at the late exhibition. They are now cutting them up and offering them for sale at their store. oct3 2i.
