Old Country Atmosphere Lives On In The Island

Many parts of the Island are likened to the English countryside and many people from abroad are quick to mention this fact. This natural theme is given impetus when a visitor to the province calls at Woodleigh, the estate of Lieut.-Col. E. W. Johnstone at Burlington. Here glamor and tradition of the "auld sod" have been recaptured in the miniature creations by Col. Johnstone. In the beautiful grounds of Woodleigh the ancient scenes of England and Scotland are brought to the eyes of visitors and in them historical happenings come back to life and memory. Recreations of famous castles and churches, cottages and inns, have been faithfully done to scale by Col. Johnstone whose one-time hobby has become practically a life's work. Care given to detail emphasizes the interest and devotion with which this work is carried out.

GLAMIS CASTLE
Storied Glamis castle, ancient home of Queen Mother Elizabeth, birthplace of Princess Margaret and sometime resting place of Mary Queen of Scots was one of the original re-creations. Ann Hathway's cottage, linked romantically with Shakespeare, the famous bard; Ye Olde Blue Dragon Inn, the traditional English pub; Stoke Poges Church, associated with Thomas Gray, all may be seen here in this wonderland of replicas. Some of the furnishings in Ye Olde Blue Dragon Inn were brought from England thus giving an added atmosphere of realism to the reproduction. York Minister, the see of the Archbishop of York, primate of England, is one of the most ambitious projects yet undertaken by the Colonel.

WISHING WELL
Attracting much attention from all visitors is the Wishing Well which last year contributed hundreds of dollars to the Red Cross through coins dropped by sight-seers. Also drawing tourists is the sundial, whose base is an old millstone; the lily pool where a fountain and bird bath are placed in the midst of a riot of color created by lilies and lily pads; the manor house at Stokes Poges where lived a son of the founder of the State of Pennsylvania; and the Gate Lodge. The lodge serves a triple purpose. It is an attraction in its own right, but it also does as
