Baby And Mission Bands Entertained By W.M.S.

The Margate United Church Auxiliary of the Women's Missionary Society, entertained the members of the Baby Band and their mothers, also the Mission Band members on Thursday afternoon in the church vestry.

The Baby Band secretary, Mrs. Arthur Profit, acted as chairman. A worship service, consisting of childrens and mothers prayers and the hymns "God Sees The Little Sparrow Fall", and "Jesus Loves Me" was carried out. The financial report for 1958 was read and it stated that $25.90 had been sent to the Presbytery treasurer.

A roll call showed eleven mothers, twenty members and four grandmothers present. One member, Marilla Woodside graduated from the Baby Band to the Mission Band and received her certificate and Mission Band button.

Rev. Waldo Elliott illustrated in stories to the children the importance of little things in life and made it clear that each little child was of great importance.

Mits, boxes and collection were received and dedicated.

Mr. Elliott closed the meeting with the benediction.

The ladies served ice-cream and sweets to all. Pictures were taken of the group, ending a very enjoyable afternoon.

Words Of Welcome Given By Hon. Dr. J. J. Bowlen

Honourable John J. Bowlen, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Alberta, was born on P. E. I. His message was as follows: In extending a sincere welcome to all citizens and visitors to Edmonton for the historic visit of Her Most Gracious Majesty and The Prince Philip, may I congratulate Edmonton and its civic administration for the painstaking arrangements that have been made.

Many thousands of us harbor a warm remembrance of the last visit paid to Alberta by Queen Elizabeth and the Prince, during the reign of His Majesty King George VI. I am sure that once again our Sovereign Queen will charm the hearts of thousands who will meet her, as well as the great number who will be privileged to see her as she moves through our Capital.

I have been very fortunate in having met Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth on a number of occasions and each time have been impressed by her graciousness and Queenly qualities. These sentiments will be echoed by each one of us during this Royal Visit.

GOD SAVE THE QUEEN

The Orchard Homestead Is Fine Colonial Example

Mr. and Mrs. Heath E. White, who were married in the William Emmanuel Methodist Church, 17 July, 1859, are staying at the Charlottetown Hotel. Mrs. White was the former Mrs. Pearl C. White, York Point, (nee Miss Pearl Neal). Mrs. White was very sorry on this trip to see that the old Market Building was no more. Her father helped to build this Island landmark and had the contract for the woodwork.

Mr. White was born in Montague. He was educated at Amherst College, Amherst, Mass., University of Pennsylvania and Columbia University. He became superintendent of schools in Westport, Connecticut. This is a very beautiful city and many artists, writers and wealthy people make their homes there.

RESIDENCE OF MR. AND MRS. HEATH E. WHITE

Mr. White was a well-known athlete in his younger days. In Charlottetown he won the quarter, half and mile race. The Abegweit sent him to Halifax as their representative and he won the quarter and half mile. He broke the half mile record in Halifax in 1917.

"The Orchard Homestead" shown above is the home of Mr. and Mrs. White in Fultonsville, New York. This old Colonial house is over 100 years old. There are 140 acres which are chiefly in apples and Mr. White supervises this work. The frontage is 600 feet and the property is near Albany, New York.

MARY HAWORTH Lend An Ear, Sympathetically

Dear Mary Haworth: I hope I don't sound like an interfering mother. But my son, 22, who has been in quite a dilemma for the past two weeks, came to me and asked me to help him.

Since last September he had been going steady with a girl in our neighborhood. He loves her deeply, she says, and she had said she felt the same; but he admits he is jealous of her. We talked about his feelings and his jealousy seems due to an inferiority complex, as I told him.

Anyway, the girl has broken off with him—because she had antagonized him, and he had slapped her, he said. Whereupon her parents told her they wouldn't ever speak to her again, if she had anything more to do with him.

ADmits DID WRONG

I told him he was wrong, of course, and he apologized to her; and I know he felt worse than anybody. He came home and cried, realizing his wrong. But there the matter stands. There is a good deal of interference from her mother, it seems.

James has a good job and doesn't smoke or drink. Not to make excuses, he is jolly and easy-going as a rule, nothing seems to bother him, he takes everything in stride; and that's why I can't understand his doing this. In his remorse, he is a nervous wreck about it all. He can't keep anything on his stomach. I don't know how to help him. Maybe you can advise us. Thank you. O.J.

BE SYMPATHETIC

Dear O.J.: You seem to be a pretty straight thinker in taking the measure of your son's behavior; and he pays you a compliment in asking your help with it.

As for what you might do, to help tide him through the present anguish of defeat and remorse, I believe you are already doing what can be done—in listening loyally, and reacting honestly, to his tangled recital of what went wrong.

Usually there is little, directly, that parents can do, to ease youth's pain in these matters, except sympathize interestedly from the sidelines, in a spirit of respect for human suffering.

LAD IS LEARNING

In a sense, James is having growing pains, as an inescapable part of the price of being alive, and making the journey from selfishness to knowledge; or from heedless childhood to thoughtful far-sighted careful self-management.

He is learning through present frustration, for example, that it is better to control your temper or contain your anger until it cools, than to let it blaze and damage relationships. He is learning, also, in the same lesson, that a would-be tight-fisted hold on love—or an attempt to "own" love rather than earn it daily—tends to kill love rather than keep it secure.

If adolescents are to get on their feet as sturdy adults, comfortable and reliable in making the best of things, they simply have to learn to bear the costs of their own mistakes, to a large extent. And everyone makes mistakes, of course. It has been said that the only person who never makes a mistake is the person who never did anything—which is a fatal waste of life, obviously.

YIELD PROFIT

The fabulous tycoon, Bernard Baruch, in his autobiography, My Own Story (Henry Holt) publisher recalls that early in his financial career, he formed a habit of facing his blunders without excuse, and analyzing the why's and wherefores of jolting mistakes, as a guide to smarter behavior next time. Thus utilized, even his
