SARTORIAL PROBLEM

WELLINGTON, N.Z. —(CP)— Black has been the traditional sports color of New Zealand since it was made famous by the rugby all-blacks team. Officials of the team for the Summer Olympics hope that by use of silver buttons and badges, white trousers, shoes and hats, the New Zealanders will look smarter at Helsinki this summer than in previous Olympics.

store atmosphere than in an elegant salon. The aloofness of super-trained salesladies simply doesn't appeal to her nature, and it's foolish to force it on her. If you are embarrassed by being with her on a shopping trip, why not let her go alone? If you must go, don't take it too seriously. Look for bargains yourself, and if a salesman addresses you informally, pass it off with a gracious smile. Perhaps your kindness may lighten the salesman's day just as his cheeriness lightens your mother-in-law's.

Don't upset a pleasant household by continuing to worry over this matter. It's really a trifling situation and is best left alone. You're lucky to have a good mother-in-law and she's fortunate to have so fine a daughter-in-law. You just need a little more understanding, and that, of course, comes best with passing years.

DEAR MISS DIX: I'd like you to print this as a word of encouragement to other young women. I'm 31 years old, with a son 14 by my first marriage. After my first husband and I separated, I did lots of things I shouldn't have done. Instead of someone trying to help me, everyone talked about me until I began to hate everyone. I started to go with a nice man, but someone told him things about me that were true—and some that weren't—so we broke off. Then I met another man, and before anyone else had a chance to say something, I told him everything I had done. A month later we married. Now I am a good mother and wife, with a husband who is trying to help me get my good name back. He is wonderful to me.

ANSWER: Bravo to you both! Your youthful mistakes were certainly not altogether your own fault. With the proper home atmosphere and family life, you wouldn't have made them in the first place. A firm resolve to overcome the handicap of a tragic youth, and the aid of your fine husband, will soon erase from your mind, and from the minds of others, all memory of the past. Look to the future and, with the lessons you have learned, give your husband and children the advantages of a happy home that you so sorely missed.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am a freshman in high school and have a crush on a boy in my class. He's very good looking, but extremely conceited. I'm considered pretty and am told I have a good personality. While he is the serious type, I'm somewhat silly. I have lots of other dates but like this boy more than any other. How can I make him take more notice of me?

ANSWER: Why bother with a boy who is so conceited he thinks he's conferring a favor on a girl to look at her? Since you have lots of other boy friends, find one who'll be more suited to your own personality. A boy who's too serious will soon bore you, while he'll find your silliness most irritating. Don't waste time mooning over so unsuitable—and unattainable—a prospect.

PARTIES ARE SUCH FUN!

I love entertaining—I'm sure you do, too! But I rarely launch into fussy recipes that demand last-minute attention. For main course, I like the sort of thing that can be re-heated in a double boiler, or in a casserole in the oven—or a jelly salad. For dessert, I serve something chilled or moulded... or a scrumptious chocolate cake. And my favorite way of serving chocolate cake, is with this sensational frosting:

EASY "MAPLE CREAM" FROSTING

1½ cups brown sugar
½ cup butter
½ cup undiluted Carnation Milk
Pinch of salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
2½ cups (about) icing sugar

Stir brown sugar and butter over low heat in saucepan until mixture boils. Carefully stir in Carnation milk. Reaches boiling point, and boils 4 minutes. Cool. Add salt and vanilla. Add sifted icing sugar to bring mixture to spreading consistency. Beat smooth. Spread quickly. Enough frosting to fill and cover an 8 or 9 inch layer cake.

Parties planning tip: In a recipe file, keep menus which "went" particularly well from the point of view of serving, and of the enthusiastic reception they received.

YOU'LL ENTERTAIN MORE HAPPILY

—and after—if you realize that you can give cream-like flavor and consistency to party dishes... by using Carnation Evaporated Milk. Use it in sauce, soups, casseroles, dishes, desserts. And Carnation is heavy enough to whip—like this: Chill undiluted Carnation in tray of mechanical refrigerator until ice crystals form. Or let unopened can stand on ice several hours. Chill bowl and beater. Whip rapidly. For topping use, for each half-cup of cream add 1 tablespoon lemon juice after whipping until foamy; when stiff, sweeten to taste.

COFFEE AND PARTIES

just naturally belong together—so do coffee and Carnation. Try it—and see what I mean! For 25 to 30 cups, tie ½ lb. drip-grind coffee loosely in cheesecloth... drop into 18 cups boiling water... "steep" 15 minutes. (Do not boil.) Serve with undiluted Carnation, to 25 lucky, lucky people. Millions of coffee lovers prefer Carnation to cream in coffee... and it costs only half as much.
