power harnessed to meet the electrical needs of the community.

Similarly in the Philippines a lady from the U. S. A. after six months study changed the looms at a cost of one dollar each to improve the quality output and place the product once again on the world market.

In Greece, one village was assigned as an experiment to help increase the protein content of the people's diet. In the first year they were taught to raise chickens and eggs, to improve the breeding and handle eggs properly. Now that village is proud of its record, producing more chicks and eggs than all the rest of Greece.

In Central America pig-nip was developed so that coffee leaves etc. were made palatable. Within five years, the pig population has increased five-fold.

PAYING THE BILLS

Touching on the cost to the world and to Canada in particular, for this technical service, Dr. Keenleyside said, "We contribute five millions and receive about four millions." Both U.S.A. and Britain contribute more liberally but the technical program is supported by experienced business men who see a profit in the whole movement, in addition to better living conditions in the countries most involved in seeking improvements.

The donor countries in the main desire peace and prosperity for all countries and being that kind of people we cannot see children suffering. "This is primarily a moral issue requiring universal enthusiastic support," Dr. Keenleyside said.

A vote of thanks was moved by Walter Hyndman and seconded by Dr. Lloyd Shaw.

PREVIOUS VISITS

Before dealing with his subject matter, Dr. Keenleyside referred to his invitation to speak on this occasion as a very real honour.

He spoke of the real enjoyment his wife and two daughters experienced when vacationing in the province two years. "Something they will not let me forget."

Dr. Keenleyside also referred to his visit to the city on the occasion of the Royal Tour 17 years ago. "Several of us decided to forego the functions arranged for us and hired a car. We drove out 40 miles or so and enjoyed the island very much, in spite of the rain, which many will recall."

Touching on the history of the Y. M. C. A., Dr. Keenleyside referred to the many reasons for which the local organization may well be proud. He suggested that the past should be studied with a view to matching the future with it.

"My own experience with the early age since which time I have come in contact with the organization in many parts of the world," Dr. Keenleyside said.

Harvard Teacher Sees Poverty Amid Plenty; Has Suggestion

TORONTO (CP) — Harvard's Canadian-born Professor John Galbraith urged Canada and the United States Tuesday to abandon the "juvenile habit" of exaggerating the importance of tariffs, taxes and farm and labor policies in the countries' economic future.

They may be important, he said, but not vital. For if they were, the two countries would have been ruined long ago, since different policies in different ways at different times.

The tall, lanky native of Iowa, Ont., who shook the New York stock market last summer with his declaration that it was over-exaggerated, told the Gordon economic commission that while economic growth is important, it is rapidly becoming less important than the question of "how we use it."

Progress left a hard core of poverty in its wake. In Canada the wealth turned him into a man to value a "violently colored" automobile more than the arts. Cities still retained their ugliness and progress gave dirt a vertical dimension.

Economic advance did nothing to decrease the delinquency rate. Working hours were shorter but more and more time was being spent in the losing struggle to get to work. Mental disorders were increasing.

WILL RECALL POOR Commission Chairman Walter L. Gordon agreed that the age of plenty leaves a hard core of impoverished. He agreed that the plight of the poverty-stricken should be "very much on our conscience" when it came time to write the report and draw conclusions as to the kind of policies best suited for Canada's future.

The commission, in the second day of two weeks of sittings here, also heard a suggestion from an industrialist that Canada should allow work on Sundays, just as in the U. S.

D. W. Ambridge, president of Abitibi Power and Paper Co. Ltd., said huge outlays of capital will be required if Ontario paper mills are to double production in the next 25 years.

At least some $750,000,000 may be needed but the amount could be reduced by 10 per cent if the mills were allowed to run seven days a week when the market requires it.

The Lord's Day Alliance Act, he said, prevents Sunday work in Canada with the exception of British Columbia. Apparently the act "hasn't got passed the Rockies yet." He said part of the "obsession" against Sunday work results from Quebec church objections.

OTTAWA (Special) — Mr. A. Matheson (L-Queens) told Commons Tuesday that the present slump in agricultural production and markets is disturbing the people of his Province. The position, he said, is far from ominous and since potatoes are normally produced in the main crop, not only potato-growers affected but urban dwellers well.

He expressed gratification if Finance Minister Harris has ordered further studies of the issue of potato tariffs in addition to the report made by the Tariff Board recently.

He brought to the attention of the Commons the fact that the loss in Prince Edward Island resulting from changes in the employment Insurance Act, approximately one-third of those who qualified for insurance benefits under the amended act, led under the condition to be corrected as speedily as possible.

Storm conditions have caused grievous loss to his Province, Mr. Matheson said. While the western part of Quebec was hard hit, much greater storm damage occurred in J. Watson MacNaughton constituency of Prince. In conclusion, Mr. Matheson spoke of the being carried forward in the Maritime Provinces by the Atlantic Provinces Economic Council.

Evening Sittings Of Presbyterian Winters Will Represent Canada At Inauguration

A devotion service led by the C. G. L. T. girls of Trinity Church, Presbyterian, at the annual meeting of the W. M. S. Presbyterian annual meeting yesterday. Margaret Parker led in prayer; Joan Cudmore read the scripture and Carol Thompson gave the meditation message. Rev. Howard Christie brought greetings from the Prince Edward Island Presbytery. The choir of Trinity rendered two special numbers: "Bow Thy Knee To The Lord Thy Maker" and a selection by male voices, "Jesus Savior Pilot Me".

The guest speaker Miss Aileen Ratz, port worker at Halifax, was introduced by the Presbyterial president, Mrs. Cutcliffe. Miss Ratz gave a vivid description of her work noting that the new Canadians with whom she had to deal were people with ideas and ideals not unlike the people who live in Canada. She said that they were proud of their new homeland. She said that in all instances they displayed remarkable courage.

Bringing their old world culture with them, these people, the speaker observed had a faith so deep and sincere that nothing could take it away from them. "The smile that they give needs no interpreter for any language," said Miss Ratz.

The port worker went on to relate that the Bible has been supplied to immigrants in thirteen different languages. She threw out the challenge to her listeners to give to immigrants in their midst, what they would wish for themselves but in particular, give to them the love of God in their lives and prayers.
