REPRESENTED IN CANADA BY J. A. MORRISON, HALIFAX

THE MANAGER'S SAFE.

"What are you doing there?"

"Nothing, sir."

The answer came from a pale and feeble-looking youth, standing before the open safe in the sanctum of the manager of the Continental Banking Corporation, Limited, Old Broad-st., E.C.

The question had been put by the manager himself on re-entering his room after a momentary absence in the outer office. The clerk, for such was the youth's position in the bank, flushed to the roots of his hair as the manager thrust him aside, and ostentatiously secured the door to the safe.

Nothing more passed between the two. The clerk laid a slip of paper with figures written upon it on the manager's table, and having thus apparently fulfilled the duty which brought him thither he went out closing the door gently behind him.

The manager watched him as he retired, watched him through a transparent pane in the glass door after he had retired, watched him as he took his hat from a peg, and watched him with special eagerness as he passed through the swing doors on the way out (no doubt) to dinner; and the expression in the eyes of the great man might have suggested to a witness, if there had been one, the existence of some grave suspicion regarding the security of the contents of the safe. After making an examination of the papers shut in behind the iron door in order to satisfy himself that they had not been tampered with, and after transferring some papers from the safe to a drawer of his writing-table which he locked up again quickly, an occupation that seemed to suggest grave and deeply reflections, and during which he looked around him frequently to see that he was alone—the manager turned his attention to the slip which had been placed on his table by the young man who had just left the room.

Upon the slip were written these figures:

"£10,000—morrow, Saturday, Messrs. Bulling & Co. will call for the second lot of bonds early on Monday."

"Ten thousand pounds!" he muttered. "Saturday! What an opportunity!—this is Friday—if I can wait till tomorrow!"

The manager pressed his hand to his forehead, and gave up his thoughts to some problem that weighed upon him. Presently he shook off the moodiness, and reaching out his arm, gave two sharp strokes to a hand bell standing beside his inkstand. The double signal was a summons for the chief cashier, who answered it without delay.

"Come in, Mr. Price," said the door, if you please.

The cashier did as he was bidden and came to the manager's table, to hear what that gentleman had to say. But the latter did not speak, he stood facing his colleague, and looking into his eyes with a scared expression of countenance. Mr. Price was startled.

"Anything the matter, sir?" he inquired.

"Yes."

"Nothing serious, I hope?"

The manager did not reply. He appeared to be steadying himself, to be suppressing an excitement which was entirely unusual with him. When he spoke at last, he seemed anxious to prove to himself that his memory had not failed him.

"What time was it, Mr. Price, when you and I went down to the strong-room this morning?"

"It was precisely twelve o'clock, sir."

"You remember what bonds and securities I handed to you there?"

"Perfectly."

"Please to confirm my memory by enumerating them."

"Certainly, sir." And the cashier told them off on his fingers. When he had finished, the manager reminded him that there was still one lot of securities which he had omitted to mention. Did Mr. Price recall what they were?

"To be sure, sir, how stupid of me! There were also Messrs. Bulling & Co.'s first lot of £1,000 bonds."

"For what amount?"

"Why, sir, you know as well as I do. They amount to £8,000."

"You placed them all in the usual letter-bag, did you not?"

"Yes, sir. But you were present yourself."

"Quite so, quite so. My observation, however, has failed me, and I am anxious to take up the clew through you."

"I don't quite understand," began Mr. Price; but his chief interrupted him.

"You placed Messrs. Bulling's documents in the basket with all the others—under my eyes. You brought the basket to my room here—under my eyes. Finally, you deposited the basket and its contents in my safe here—under my very eyes. Your memory confirms mine, does it not?"

"Assuredly."

"What time is it now?"

"Striking one, sir."

"When do Messrs. Bulling come for this first batch of bonds?"

"They will take them away at two o'clock."

"They cannot take them away."

"Why not?" asked the cashier with surprise.

"They are gone already."

"Gone! What do you mean?"

"They have been stolen! You had better see for yourself. Here is the key. Mr. Price opened the safe, and made a careful search. In two minutes he convinced himself that the bonds were missing from the safe, and in five minutes more he satisfied himself that they were not in the room, unless, indeed they were locked in the manager's desk—an alternative which was instantly dismissed from his mind.

"I am entirely at a loss," he began.

"So am I, Mr. Price," broke in the manager. "I have not left the room since you deposited the bonds in the safe. It is true, the door of the safe has been standing open most of the time. But, on the other hand, I have received no visitors; not a soul has entered the room but yourself."

"You forget, sir, that one of the clerks, young Mr. Aspin, brought you a slip from me about the second batch of securities which are to be withdrawn from the custody of the Bank of England to-morrow, Saturday—£10,000 worth, the receipt for which is, I believe, in your possession."

The manager made no remark in response to the latter assertions—concerning the bonds and the receipt believed to be in his possession. But he referred significantly to the young clerk and his errand.

"Yes, Mr. Aspin was here for a few moments. I don't like to suggest any suspicion against him."

The manager hesitated. Mr. Price followed up the thread.

A Brockville Druggist's Case

BROCKVILLE, April 24th.—The popular impression is that doctors and druggists seldom take their own medicine. This is no doubt true, but when a doctor takes it he generally calls in one of his own profession, in whose skill he has every confidence, or when a druggist is in a similar situation, he often puts his faith in the preparations of some other chemist which he knows give good results. Both the doctors and druggists in such cases show their good sense. A case in point happened in this town a short time ago. Mr. F. M. Turner, the well known and popular druggist, who is now travelling for Parke, Davies & Co., has for a long time been a sufferer from congestion and inflammation of the kidneys. He tried a great many remedies, but without results. His patrons, however, spoke so highly of Dudd's Kidney Pills that he was induced to try them. He now states that he is completely cured, and to your correspondent he said that as a rule he had very little faith in patent medicines, but that for the cure of kidney troubles, rheumatism, backache, etc., he does not know of any remedy that is giving such good results as Dudd's Kidney Pills.

Young King Alexander of Servia, who at seventeen has seized hold of the reins of government, is a broad-shouldered boy of medium height, rather handsome and unusually intelligent. He is energetic and self-willed, and for his years unpleasantly cynical. At the time of the boy's coup d'etat his disreputable father was enjoying the pleasures which kings in exile pursue in Paris.

USE SKODA'S DISCOVERY, the great blood and nerve remedy.

Don't Stuff a Cold.

If you do you will, nine times in ten, have a fever to starve. A cold is a shock received by the myriad nerves that bristle near the surface of a human body. This shock is transmitted to the nerve centres, and then back to the mucous membranes, forcing a great amount of blood to those membranes, creating a more or less severe irritation, and consequent rise in the temperature, followed by chills. Excess of food in the stomach still more increases the temperature; and, worst of all, helps clog the secretions or natural outlets of the body. It is high time we broke away from an old notion which, like some others, has done more harm than good. For example, in years past how many poor fever sufferers, burning with an internal fire and thirst, were hurried to an untimely grave because not allowed cooling drinks or a bit of ice by the old time treatment for fevers, as foolish as the adage for fools. At last one cunning delirious patient got to a pump of cold water and drank his fill; determined not to leave until the well ran dry, he attacked the fever, recovered, and doctors learned a lesson. Experimenting with a severe cold is a dangerous custom, as most persons try one remedy only until some friend suggests another "sure cure," as Mark Twain so humorously describes. When slight hoarseness or tightening of the nasal membranes warns one of a skin exposure or chill from wet, act promptly; a delay is dangerous. With children it may mean croup and strangulation; with adults, catarrh, bronchitis, perhaps pneumonia. If neglected, nothing can prevent the sneezing, red nose, and watery eyes of a person with a cold. Soreness of throat would soon get to bed without stitches in the house as without that old-fashioned remedy, Johnson's Anodyne Liniment, near at hand for croupy children. Used with a mild laxative, as described in a pamphlet, which I. S. Johnson & Co., Boston, Mass., will send free to anyone. Johnson's Liniment will cure a cold for adults quicker than any known remedy. A mild, nutritious diet, a gentle physic to open the secretions, and a little of that old Anodyne from your druggist, will conquer any cold. Johnson's Anodyne Liniment was originated by an old family physician more than seventy years ago.

The experience of physicians and the public prove that taking Scott's Emulsion produces an immediate increase in flesh; it is, therefore, of the highest value in wasting diseases and consumption.

Dr. Koch's cure for consumption went up like a rocket and came down like a stick; but Putnam's Emulsion still shines with undimmed lustre as the best remedy for wasting diseases.
