

Doctn.

THE PASTOR'S DAUGHTER.

BY GEORGE F. MORRIS.
A hand became her father's daughter.
Deep-wooded near a streamlet's side,
Where dwelt the village pastor's child.

The town-gallants crossed hill and plain,
To seek the groves of her retreat,
And many followed in her train.

One lady even to dinner sprang,
A hand became her father's daughter.
He struck his lip as every string
To love vibrated in her breast.

How seldom leads the wealthy gay,
With all his sophistry array,
The sweet and good primrose-way.
