Ontario, Quebec May Join In Program Of Crop Insurance

OTTAWA (CP)—Ontario and Quebec have indicated they will join the federal-provincial crop insurance program provided its coverage level is raised to 80 per cent and forage crops are included in the scheme.

S. B. Williams, assistant deputy minister of agriculture told the Commons agriculture committee Tuesday that both the Ontario and Quebec governments already have introduced insurance legislation.

Mr. Williams said—the two provinces stated during a federal-provincial conference last February that the 60 per cent maximum coverage level, stipulated in the federal act, would be unattractive to most of their farmers.

Their crop yields normally didn't vary enough to come down to the 60-per-cent level. Therefore, they wanted coverage raised to a maximum of 80 per cent.

Mr. Williams said that only the Prairie Provinces, where yield variations are much larger than elsewhere in Canada, were content with the present maximum. But even there they would like to see the maximum raised for some other than grain crops.

WANT FORAGE IN
Ontario and Quebec also wanted forage crops, now excluded from coverage, brought under the scheme.

"I can see no reason why a program acceptable to all parties could not be developed," Mr. Williams said.

He did not agree with some officials who say that forage crops are part of a farmer's production unit and thus not insurable under the act.

One remaining difficulty, he said, was to find a method of establishing a farm's average hay yield and of estimating losses suffered. But this problem was solved in Sweden and his department now was studying the insurance scheme there.

The Crop Insurance Act, passed in 1959, provides farmers with insurance for up to 60 per cent of their long-term average crop yield. The federal government contributes 20 per cent of the premiums and shares equally with the provinces and program's administrative cost.

ANGRY DUTCHMEN RIOT IN AMSTERDAM

Burning trucks and debris litter the "newspaper row" in Holland's capital city of Amsterdam Tuesday in the wake of rioting by angry construction workers who staged a one-day strike. They were protesting the death of a bricklayer in a clash with police Monday night. The mob first marched on the downtown building of the De Telegraaf newspaper, apparently angered by its story about Monday night's demonstration to protest the building trade union's decision to take two per cent of non-union workers' vacation bonuses.
