ENGINEER'S WATERLOO.
After Years of Successful Work He Develops Color Blindness.
There was a peculiar case of color blindness brought to the attention of the superintendent of a local railway the other day while a test of the visual organs of the employees was being conducted.
Among those examined was the engineer of an express train, who had the reputation of being one of the best men who had ever stood in a locomotive cab.
To the utter surprise of the superintendent, however, when the man was undergoing the examination, it was found that he was suffering from color blindness of a character heretofore unknown to those making the tests.
When the engineer was called, the superintendent felt that it was almost a waste of time to apply the tests in his (the engineer's) case, and after he had told off all the colors accurately he was confirmed in this belief. But to make himself doubly sure that no mistake should be made he submitted the man to a second test. Holding up a piece of bright red ribbon, he said to the engine man:
"What color do you see?"
"Green," was the prompt reply.
The superintendent could hardly believe his ears, and the question was repeated.
"Green," again replied the engineer.
Then the green ribbon was held up.
"What color do you now see?" inquired the superintendent.
"Red," was the answer.
The fact that all the colors had been accurately called at the first trial puzzled the superintendent greatly, and he said to the engineer that he wished to subject him to a further examination later in the day.
At the third trial the superintendent first held up a piece of blue ribbon and asked the engineer to name its color.
"Blue," he answered, without hesitation.
"And this?" elevating a red strip.
"Red."
"Give this one," holding up a green.
"Green."
This result deepened the complexity of the examining board, and it was finally decided to send the man to an expert oculist for a still further examination. It was subsequently learned that the engineer had shown the same peculiar characteristics as upon the three previous tests, when he was called on to name the colors.
He was therefore taken from his engine and given a lucrative position in the townhouse—Doston Herald.
