

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. If a young man sends a girl a corsage to wear to some particular affair, but the flowers do not harmonize with the one suitable gown she must wear, what should she do?

A. Wear them any way, or carry them. It would certainly be very rude to leave them at home.

Q. Should I have the privilege of introducing ex-President Herbert Hoover to someone, what title would I use?

A. You would introduce him simply as "Mr. Hoover."

Q. Should the hostess, when entertaining at a club or restaurant, wear a hat?

A. Yes, this is customary.

How Can I!!!

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I prevent streaks of bluing when laundering?

A. Add a lump of soda, dissolved in a little hot water, to the bluing water on wash day. This will prevent the bluing from setting in the clothes, and makes them perfectly white.

Q. How can I prevent scurvy on a baby's head?

A. Pure white Vaseline jelly rubbed on the baby's head is an excellent preventive of scurvy, and acts as a splendid tonic for the growth of the hair.

Q. How can I get relief from a felon?

A. For relief add to draw the felon quickly to a head, wrap the skin from the inside of an egg around the end of the finger.

For Tomorrow

YOU can do much this day to promote harmony by ignoring petty matters and by going out of your way to adjust yourself to the moods and temperaments of your associates. There is a tendency toward irascibility during this period, but if you are on guard, you can do much to counteract the unfriendly influence.

In business it would be better to stick to routine procedures rather than attempt the untried, and it would be well to make no changes in your financial program at this time. Tempting programs may be offered, but if you will analyze them, you will note that the offers come from those more affluent than yourself and less able, therefore, to understand your financial limitations.

For the Birthday

If tomorrow is your birthday, you may be prepared for a year of unexpected changes. Where business or the professions are concerned, the changes should be notably rewarding and gratifying, so be prepared to accept opportunities as they arise and do not fear to experiment. Where domestic matters or romance are concerned, however, think long and well before acting.

If others try to force you to make hasty decisions in such matters, temporize, avoid argument by asking for time to consider. You will be glad later if you do not yield to pressure.

A child born on this day will be ambitious, venturesome and creative.

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

With sunshine today and a warmly tempered wind, May moved farm-folks on to the cropping... With starshine now and, for later night-loiterers, moonlight summer in the heavens; blossoms and fullness and fragrance and gay little zephyrs proffering their incense plifered from meadow and woodland. How pleasant this day! And how enchanting to anticipate those that will follow!

"If I had my choice of seasons," a mother of four said to me the other evening of our favorites, "I'd have it forever summer! It's easily the best of them all — so nice for the children and all of us."

Another preferred the autumn. "Because," she explained, "there's that about it that is extremely suggestive; it's all for bettering folks spiritually. In its brilliant hues it points a sermon to me, one wordless but convincing. The tiers of color tell so plainly that no matter how pleasant and care-free life hitherto has been it can soon be over and done with, like leaves and vegetation about. Even the air has a solemnity about it — and a serenity I enjoy. Perhaps I'm being odd," she smiled, "nevertheless I would choose autumn for my season."

"I like winter," Jamie ventured preference. "Not that it's better than the others at all, but there's the skating and hockey... and the snow. I enjoy those." James smiled. "Well, to me there's no question about it; there's none can equal the spring. I guess," he offered, "I get my perspective in part from those old-fashioned wintery winters we used to get here on The Island. At any rate for me to come at last to spring is like coming at last to walking a distance through the dimness of a woods... It's a nice feeling!... And I don't suppose there ever was, or will be a sight more satisfying to a farmer than to see the fields turning green or to come again to the sowing."

And May with an emerald in her hair, sets daffodils to blossoming in garden-places and "close by a river's brink," for the like of Jamie to gather happily, she opened a first raggedy dandelion, today.

And these tokens brought the shearing to this place in the road. Rob extends the period over several days. He, unlike the farmers at Alderlea, who continue the chore to its completion at one or two sittings, seizes opportune moments to shear one. Today we came to the barnyard to call him to dinner...

James will have it that we in our housekeeping "Out Home" overlooked this item. He chuckled about it to Pat recently. "Ellen is much like a woman I knew of," he remarked. "She never bothered to call her husband to meals; if the poor old fellow happened to come to them, it was all very well; but if not she sat down calmly to her own and later cleared the table without a thought of his hunger!"

The barnyard was deserted, the tractor idle. We found Rob at the shearing, the sun warm on his shoulders in a nook of near meadow.

"And there's one done!" he checked off a ewe with relief. Then gathering to the fleece neatly in his arms he paused to watch with some pride, the shorn mother hasten to join her lamb and comrades of the flock.

So with sunshine, daffodils, a dandelion and a warmly tempered wind for the shearing May moved farm-folks today noticeably nearer the cropping. Good-night...

fools by one" — he paused, and there was loud laughter before he resumed — "of the wisest men in the country." The lecturer then rose. "Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "I am not half so big a fool as the chairman" — he paused, and again there was loud laughter — "would have you suppose!"

Cracked Eggs

If an egg is cracked at one end it cannot be boiled successfully. If cracked at both ends there will be no waste, and it will boil as well as if whole.

Dust When sweeping a rug with a broom, first place pieces of wet newspaper over the rug and it can then be swept without raising so much dust.

Tack Substitute If you need tacks and there are none on hand try using the phonograph needles with worn points.

The sweet old lady smiled at the little girl who had been left in charge of the bakery. "Don't you sometimes feel tempted to eat one of the cup-cakes?" "Of course not; that would be stealing. I only lick them"

Cook's Corner

BEEF UPSIDE-DOWN CAKE

Inexpensive — and as easy on time as it is on money! Mighty good to eat, too. Yield—Six servings.

- 1/2 pound minced lean beef
1/2 cup chopped onion
1/2 cup diced celery
1/2 cup diced green pepper, optional
2 tablespoons shortening
1 can (10 ounces) condensed tomato soup
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
1 1/2 cups prepared biscuit or baking mix
1/2 cup milk

Loosen the minced beef with a fork; mix in onion, celery and green pepper (if used).

Heat the shortening; add meat mixture and fry, stirring often, until lightly browned.

Stir in tomato soup and prepared mustard; heat thoroughly.

Measure biscuit or baking mix into a bowl; make a well in the centre and pour in milk; combine lightly but completely.

Turn hot meat mixture into a greased deep 8-inch round pan; drop biscuit dough by spoonfuls over top and spread evenly.

Bake in a hot oven, 425 degrees, 18 to 20 minutes.

Turn out onto a heated platter and cut into wedges for serving.

THE HEART DISEASE WORKER IN INDUSTRY

There is no denying the fact that heart and blood vessel diseases cause more deaths than practically all other diseases and it is but natural for us all to want to make sure that we are not living in a false security as far as these diseases are concerned.

However, we are not learning so much about heart disease that the more we learn, the less we fear it, not because it is not as dangerous as ever but because so many patients have learned to live safely with their heart disease.

One of the big advances in knowledge of heart disease brought to us by the clinical and research work of the American Heart Association is that the majority of patients with heart disease can do useful and gainful work, which not only means help to the community but raises the morale of the heart patient as he realizes that he is filling his place in the world despite his handicap.

In the preface of a booklet issued by the American Heart Association, called "These Hands Are Able," we read:

"Studies show that workers with heart disease keep pace with unimpaired employees in work output. Recently, when heart disease workers were matched with unimpaired workers on the same type of job in more than 50 different industries, the heart disease workers, as a group, produced better than 2 per cent above the unimpaired workers on the same job. The experience of large industries that make selective placement of workers with heart disease supports these findings. Notwithstanding

Don't Rush A Friend

Girl Advised To Let Boy Take The Initiative In Romance

DEAR MISS DIX: A month ago I met a very attractive boy. He came to visit me once or twice, and has called me several times, but has never asked me out. Do you think I should drop him before I get any serious ideas? We're both 19.

DON'T RUSH FRIENDS

ANSWER: Can't you accept a boy's friendship for a month without worrying about getting serious? If you are going to rush all your friends like that, you'll be a long time getting one who is seriously inclined. Be sensible, accept the boy as a friend, and let him make the first move toward getting serious. If he does, if he doesn't, wait for the next man.

Muriel Nissen

DEAR MISS DIX: Alice and I recently became engaged, but she finds it difficult to break off with her former boy friend, I have repeatedly told her to break off with him, and the only reason she gives for not doing so is that he's a friend of the family. To me this is not a sufficient reason.

ANSWER: Nor would it be to me! The lady is apparently trying to have her cake and eat it; she likes the prestige of being engaged, yet hesitates to give up another man's devotion. It would be better for you to break the engagement until you are satisfied that she has severed all connection with the other man.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am a 22-year-old widow with two small children. I have fallen in love with a widower of 39, who also has two children. I'm undecided whether I could be a mother to his youngsters, and he wants me to be sure about that before we marry. Sometimes his children get on my nerves; perhaps it's just that I resent the fact of his having a ready-made family.

ANSWER: Since you certainly wouldn't want him to resent your children, aren't you being a bit selfish to feel as you do about his youngsters? I really don't think that's the reason for your hesitation. You are just too young to have the responsibility of so large a family, and I recommend that you give up the idea, at least for some time.

DEAR MISS DIX: As long as I can remember, I've had an inferiority complex. I try to cover it up, and have found out that some people think I'm conceited. I'm 17. How can I convince people that I'm not stuck-up?

ANSWER: Paradoxically, many folks do misinterpret inferiority for conceit. The silence of inferiority masquerades as the silence of
