STEVENS-COCHRANE

A very pretty June wedding took place at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Annie B. Cookrane, "The Friendly Maple," in Henwick, on Saturday, June 27, at four o'clock P. M., when her eldest daughter Mildred M. was united in marriage to Henry W. Stevens, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold F. Stevens, of Medfield, Mass. The Rev. Fred Bushchmeyer, pastor of the Congregational church of the University of New Hampshire, performed the double ring ceremony in front of a beautiful arch of asparagus fern studded with crown wetch. There were other floral decorations of roses, foxglove and

The bride was given in marriage by her mother, and her aunt, Mrs. Charles N. Flanders played the wedding music. The bride was a charmingly attired in a long gown of white satin, with train and "ring" bridal veil. She carried a shower bouquet of white rose buds and was attended by her sisters, Mrs. Ruth C. Gillingham as matron of honor and Miss Thelma Cochran as bridesmaid; who wore gowns of pink Mousseline de Soie and wore corsages of American Beauty roses. The groom was attended by his brother Robert F. Stevens, and his brother Allen acted as usher. The ceremony was performed in the presence of relatives and close friends of the bride and groom. A reception followed. The mothers of the bride and groom assisted in receiving. The bride and groom graduated from the University of New Hampshire, class of 1934. The bride was a member of Theta Upsilon Sorority and Psi Lambda, Honorary Home Economics Society, and in her Senior year was awarded the Psi Lambda Silver Cup for personality and scholastic standing; and for the past two years has been a successful teacher of Home Economics in North Stratford high school. For several years she was an active 4-H club member and Social leader and won many social, state and national honors. The groom was a member of the Kappa Sigma Fraternity and Alpha Sigma Honorary Architectural Society, and an active member of DeMolay; and for the past two

THE FOLLY OF GUESSING

The "eye-guesser" is everywhere. Men and women guess. Children do not bother to do even that. Many guess their eyes need attention, many more that they DON'T. The former guess is more likely to be true. FACTS are easily obtained, and should be secured by everyone who is not sure of his vision.

THE BIG STORY

By STUART JACKSON

"Bits" knew so well. Once more his hand strayed over the bound array of facts, again he delved into news now "dead" in editorial eyes. Old style of newspaper make-up had given place to new; the stolid journalism of yesterday had been replaced by the synthetic sparkle of to-day, for the bright young men had made their influx into the fold. Now the news cut across the page like sharpened swords, for a revolutionary pioneer named Lord Northcliffe had left his mark on newspapers throughout the country.

Old "Bits" opened a volume that was little more than a year old, and read: JUDGE DALE'S GRANDSON OFF ON ATLANTIC HOP. MIDCHESTER FLIER AFTER RECORD.

The adventurous boy of six had grown up into a thrill-thriving young man whose creed was speed. And Frank Freeman, the father who could not claim him, had watched him fly away into the blue that July morning just over a year ago. And what had happened to Paul? Old "Bits" turned the pages of past "Echoes," and the answer was given in the headline: MIDCHESTER FLIER CRASHES TO DEATH.

And there now, assembled before him, were all the human story of a father who had kept silent through the years to save stigma falling upon his children. But Old "Bits" knew that there was a limit to human endurance. He knew the agony of frustration that Frank Freeman had suffered—knew that it was humanly impossible for such a father to see his baby daughter grown up to be a bride without yearning to disclose his identity to her.

And surely Frank Freeman had suffered enough? He was almost an old man now. Surely young Michael Raynor, whom Pamela was to marry to-morrow, would be man enough not to let such disclosure make any difference—and surely Pamela herself would understand?

All through the night Old "Bits" wrote on, linking up the facts of years with the wedding that was to be an important event in Midchester news to-morrow. A peculiar mist clouded his eyes from time to time, his ears were still trickling him into thinking there was a question in the corridor, like somebody outside the door waiting for him, and the thumping in his heart was like the pounding of the rotary presses that he had always loved to hear.

On and on he wrote, covering the folios of paper, until the last fact was recorded, and he wrote "End." Then he rose, gathered the sheets up, and stumbled out into the corridor from whence the queer noise came. . . .

It seemed to him that the whole building had suddenly sprung to life, as it did during the day. He could hear the pressed pounding, the insistent echoes of the telephones, the clatter of typewriters and the staccato commands of many voices. He was caught in the sweep of the restless rush that gave such a significance to every movement. His mind was a rapidly-running pattern of the scenes that meant life to him here, and his brain seemed to be hammering out flashing thoughts like the racing Creed machines.

Old "Bits" stumbled on across the corridor. . . . He had served his paper for nearly half-a-century. . . . and the Chief Sub-Editor was waiting for his "copy."

At eight o'clock in the morning the sub-editors of the "Evening Echo" came trooping in and grouped themselves round their long table to get to grips with early news.

Said somebody: "Heard about poor Old 'Bits'?" He's a goner. Happened in the office early on."

Pimm—dourst of our Scots— glanced up with a queer kind of look in his eyes from something he had been scanning.

"Yes," he said, quietly, "and he's written his own obituary."

He drew a folio of paper to him, and with a thick, black pencil he wrote:

"Mr. Frank Freeman, for many years a member of the Evening Echo's editorial staff, died suddenly while on duty early this morning." "Boy!" he called. "Take that down."

Then he took "Old Bits'" "copy," and impaled it on the spike he reserved for news-stories that were destined to be still-born.

THE END.

Address and Presentation

The members of the Millview Women's Institute met at the home of Miss Mary Grant on Thursday evening, July 2, for their regular monthly meeting. After the business part of the meeting was over Mrs. Charles McKenzie read an address to Miss Adele Smith, the teacher, who had taught in the school for five years. And on behalf of the members of the Institute, Mrs. Walter Crane presented Miss Smith with a beautiful electric floor lamp.

The following is the address: Miss Adele Smith, Millview.

Dear Friend,—We the members of the Millview Women's Institute wish on this occasion to express our sincere appreciation of your efforts in connection with our society.

You are leaving us to take up the duties of your home school and we trust that your endeavors may still be crowned with success in the noble profession which you adorn.

In the years you have laboured in our district you have endeared yourself not only to our hearts but also to those of our children and when we assemble from time to time, around our "Council Fire" we feel sure their shall be a kind voice to murmur, "I wish she were here."

Although you are leaving us, it gives us pleasure to know that you are not going to a distant country and we may still have the opportunity of meeting you occasionally.

In your school work we cannot help but recall with gratitude your devotion to the pupils and it would appear that their welfare was ever in your thoughts.

We ask you to accept this small gift as a remembrance of your sojourn among us and we hope that Providence from whose hand we receive each perfect gift, may grant you years of health, happiness and prosperity.

Signed: The members of Millview Women's Institute. — Mrs. Walter Crane, President; Miss Gertrude Vallett, Sec'y Treasurer.

Passengers Taken Off Str. Iroquois

BAR HARBOR, Me., July 12.—Between 150 and 200 passengers were taken off the steamship Iroquois safely when the New York-bound vessel went aground off Bald Forepoint Island one mile south of Bar Harbor.

The passengers were removed by the tender Normanda.

Early reports said a dense fog contributed to the grounding of the steamship.

The mine-sweeper Owl was reported standing by.

Officers of the Iroquois said a hole eight feet long and three feet wide was stove in the bow 10 feet back from the prow.

All passengers on the ship enroute from Bangor to Portland and New York continued the trip by train and bus.
