

Company Of Bluejays Indicate Mild Weather

February brought a bright winged company of bluejays to the orchard, in the white frost of this morning.

"See!" we all do, called to I J a m e s across the yard, "there must be a spell of mild weather near."

James smiled.

"It could be. Ellen. But may be they're only hungry!" he said.

So busy it was for our farmers today. Now that every last little drift had settled, to rest, they restored things, at least in part, to the orderliness enjoyed before the storm. Where of late access had been gained to some of the barns in roundabout ways because of drifted snow, these were cleared away. Usual paths along the yards were tracked. Stable chickens were found by way of a horse and a sleigh.

It was fortunate both for the schoolchildren and their elders that the snowfall, now an integral part of our winter living, passed in good time. It let them get to their classes, and it allowed the farmers to excursion from the farms to bring in, in instances, sorely needed supplies. For these times, farms have a life far removed from the more self-sufficient ones we formerly knew.

Time was when the farmwife could depend on her jars of yeast sitting on a shelf in the cellar's dairy, or a last year round or square box of the pressed variety awaiting, with pleasure, in a pantry cupboard, when she wished to make a bread. Now in a more day to day, "hand to mouth" living, she experiences some dismay to find jars are in need, and appetites remain healthy, she has no yeast on hand with which to set her loaves! Today then, on the heels of the snowfall, carts, trucks and even the moonings. Cooks' lists went to stores. Farmers made their excursions — to town perhaps to market an animal, or to bring in necessary supplies of feed for stable and pigsgery. Seaman's happy bark brought the mailman's horse in smartly over the hill, and altogether again all was well.

It is good to know that the wet Sunday-borne babe, added to Mr. and Mrs. Wain's mother and well and hope to return from the hospital presently to join the homopods again.

"Come," Mack invited Ellen after supper this evening. "Let's enjoy our 4½ calves a bit of exercise."

We watched them lead the animals along the paths of the yards, happy lads, in the gathering dusk. Scamper sat on a high drift looking down on the scene, hoping against hope, we could fancy, that he would be given leave to come down and join in the fun—to nip a heel here, or otherwise help in the pasture. But he must content himself there.

And with the work and play of their day over, in the house across the lane, the his and hers are in bed, a his old arnchair, puts by his reading, yawns, looks at the clock.

"I reckon, Ellen," he grins boyishly, "I never crosses your mind that a man gets up? It's been a long time, remember, since we had our supper!"

"Until tomorrow," Diaty. Good-night....

MARY HAWORTH

Spouse's Running Around Suggests "Escapist" Reflex

Dear Mary Haworth: I am a young mother of two, with another baby on the way. My husband and I are so different in ideas, I just don't know what to do. I could be so happy if only I could trust him.

I want so much for us to be together and provide a Christian home for our children. They are lovely, but I want to do the very best for them.

But if I can't be honest with him and he won't be honest with me, I feel I can't go on like this. He bows with a league on Saturday nights and is never home staying out until 3 a.m.; then he makes no effort to be in the church; and this I mind, as I was very active in church before.

This week I learned he has been lying to me and my faith is shattered. He has lied to me about where he went after prayer-bowling. He claims there is no prayer-bowling in my town, but I know he is. He has lied to me about his work, and I know he is. He has lied to me about his friends, and I know he is. He has lied to me about his future, and I know he is.

It is as if he feel afraid that they're caught in a trap, and in day nights and never home staying out until 3 a.m.; then he makes no effort to be in the church; and this I mind, as I was very active in church before.

Very likely your third pregnancy which brings added burdens (financially and otherwise) to the life of a young mother is a factor in your husband's running around—as if he were stealing a holiday from mounting pressures.

As for how you can improve matters, improvement depends upon understanding why he acts and reacts as he does. To launch upon improvement projects, get advisory help from a family relations counsellor. (See Family Service agency listings in your local telephone directory.)

As you develop growing insight into the emotional dynamics of his child, miscommunication (in lying about his time—late hours), you will become more confident, purposeful and calm, in deciding how to deal with the problem he poses—M.H.

MARRHART HAS BABY

CALCUTTA (Reuters)—The Maharaja of Sikkim, the former Hope Cooke of New York, Thursday gave birth to a boy. Both mother and child were doing well. The new prince's mother, a 34-year-old former model, girl and niece of an American diplomat, married the present Maharajah Gyabgyai Falkei Thondup Namgyal last March. The 38-year-old ruler succeeded his father last December.

ESTABLISH RELATIONS

PEKING (Reuters)—The official New China news agency announced Saturday Communist China and the Congo Republic—formerly the French Congo with its capital in Brazzaville—had agreed to establish diplomatic relations. The Congo Republic is the first of the former French Africa states to establish diplomatic relations with Peking since France last month recognized Communist China.

gratifying. 4,806 lbs. of good used clothing were shipped to the depot in Toronto; $140.25 was forwarded for the purchasing of blankets; $185.17 was paid for freight. Besides this is much more was done to meet needs on the local level.

There has been increasing interest in systematic sharing of surplus envelopes giving in the local United Church Women groups, as well as an increase in interest and attendance at the presbyterial meetings, rallies and workshops.

United Church Women have done a great deal of visiting to hospitals, old people and have served widely in this way.

Very active were the Christian education and missionary education committees, whose function is to interpret to the women the aims and program of Christian education and the work of missions in the church. Many groups have been formed in "World Friends," Explorers and Troop Groups.

In conclusion Mrs. Moysa stated: "We women hope to go on our work still in this present year in realizing our purpose to United Church Women to unite all women of this congregation for the total mission of the church, and to provide a medium through which we may express their loyalty and devotion to Jesus Christ in Christian witness."

Try "Stake" Dinner On the Family Tonight

FROM the Lexington Avenue Pike at the 48th Street crossing, New York City, the Colonial Tavern is an old-fashioned restaurant with a Colonial Tavern — Paul Reeves, no less.

The genial innkeeper led us through the restaurant to a roomy oak table, handed us the dinner menu and suggested that we order, in our entree first, as most are cooked to order.

The "Stake-Building" (Colonial entree) has been ordered as our entire first, the following specialtie 1788:

- 1. Double-Chopped Beef with Chicken Livers
- 2. The chopped round steak
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1/4 tsp. pepper
- 1/2 cup Worcestershire sauce
- 3 tbsp. butter
- 1/2 lb. chicken livers, halved
- 1/2 cup round rosemary
- 1/4 tsp. salt, additional
- 1/2 tsp. pepper, additional
- 1/4 c. butter, additional
- 1/2 lb. thin-sliced fresh beef
- 1/4 c. dry cherrry or 1/4 c. mushroom
- 12 cherry tomatoes
- 1 Parsley
- 1/2 lb. beef, salt, pepper and Worcestershire, divide into 2 portions. Shape into ovals by pressing each into an oiled 1-p. omelette dish. Chill.
- Unmold on foil.
- When ready, brown beef on both sides in butter in large skillet. Bake 12 min. in oven, over 300 degrees F., or to desired color.
- Rise chicken livers with cold water on paper towels.
- Heat chicken livers in butter. Dust with flour, rosemary, salt and pepper mixed.
- Sauté 5 min. in remaining butter. Add mushrooms. Sauté 1 min. or until slightly browned.
- Cherry tomatoes, Simmer 3 min.
- To serve spread a bed of flaky or wild rice on a heated handsome large platter. Top with beef, chicken livers, mushroom with livers and mushrooms.
- 1 c. sauce: cherry tomatoes and parsley.
- Serve 6 to 8.

COMMENT FROM OUR CHEF

"STAKE-BUILDING" is a rather common collocation with a rich, ruff pastry instead of the topping (which this recipe has). More about Colonial cooking tomorrow.
