
NO MATTER WHERE YOU ARE ON PRINCE EDW ARD ISLAND THERE'S ALWAYS A SPOT NEARBY

Bays, rivers ideal spots for trout fishing on P.E.I.

Prince Edward Island, nestling in that arm of the Atlantic Ocean known as the Gulf of St. Lawrence, has many deeply indented bays and tidal rivers. Far inland, many of these tidal rivers merge with fresh water streams which derive their origin from hundreds of fresh water springs. Some of these fresh water streams have been dammed up for years to provide power for saw and grist mills. All of the rivers in the Province, fresh or salt, and all of the mill dams, and the few small lakes which exist, are well populated with trout.

Although the Province does not offer the fishermen the variety or quantity of fish to be obtained in the more remote parts of Canada, it is not necessary to make an expensive expedition into wild country to have a day's sport. It takes little more preparation to have a day's fishing in Prince Edward Island than it does to have a game of golf or a swim on one of the excellent Island beaches.

FISHING NEAR

No matter where the tourist decides to stay, he will find a fishing pond or stream not more than an hour's drive from the resort. There are salt water rivers where a fisherman can pick up a half-dozen sea trout, have a swim and return to his hotel or cabin well before bedtime. All that he needs is a lunch and his fishing gear. The spots are easily accessible, and no matter where the visitor goes, he will find the people friendly and co-operative.

Ordinarily, the summer visitor never see some of the Island's better fishing streams nor gets more than an inkling of the beauty spots which are hidden along the many tidal rivers. Such rivers as the Brudenell, the Montague, Vernon River, Murray River, the Mill and Kildare rivers are unsurpasszd for summer scenery, and, to the keen sportsman, provide good sea trout fishing.

Some of the tidal rivers, when the sea trout are "running", lend themselves ideally to family parties. The men folk can fish, and the children can play on a quiet beach or bathe and swim in safe and sheltered waters.

In fact, perhaps no where else in Canada can the same packaged deal be had at so many uncrowded spots as in Prince Edward Island. Fishing for the grown-ups, safe bathing for the children and unsurpassed scenery — a combined outing for the whole family.

The fisherman must acquaint himself, of course, with the best lures and flies or bait to be used on the Island to achieve the best results. The accumulated experience of many anglers down through the years is, of course, available to all visiting fishermen. It is generally acknowledged that bait fishing, for instance, is at its best in the spring and early Summer months. The old reliable angle worm is still as popular as ever, but many fishermen use live shrimp, caplan or other small live species. The more sporty fishermen seldom resort to bait fishing after the first of July; they depend on the fly exclusively.

POPULAR FLIES

By far the most popular flies in Island waters are the Parmachene Belle and the Dark Montreal. Scarcely less popular are the Orange Shrimp and the Ibis. Until ten years or so ago, these old stand-bys, in sizes from 8 to 12, were top heavy favorites.

However, since the advent of the streamer type of fly, these same flies have appeared in streamer design and also as buck-tails. Although the Belle and Montreal and the Shrimp are "musts" for any fishing trip, they do not have any monopoly in trout fishing. The Silver Doctor, the White Miller, the Dusty Miller, the Jock Scott, the Cow Dung, the Stone Fly, the Mosquito and others have found a place in the local fisherman's fly book. Many fishermen, in fact, prefer these last named.

SALMON NATIVE

Salmon are native to many of our Island rivers but are not present in any quantities until the autumn months. They do not rise readily to the fly, perhaps because we have no very deep streams and very little fast water. There is another theory or theory about the Island Salmon's indifference to artificial lures. Unlike many salmon rivers in other parts of Canada with their rocky and gravelly bottoms, the streams in Prince Edward Island have mud or sandy beds. In this mixture of sand and mud, vegetable life flourishes, and from the highly productive Island fields, the rain washes down great quantities of grubs and other foods of the land. It is believed that the salmon ground feed in Island streams and are not so prone to rise to any lure which lights on the surface of the water.

It will be well for any visitor who proposes to fish a fresh water stream to inquire whether a "run" has entered that particular stream. A "run" is the expression used to convey the fact that sea trout have entered a stream of fresh water. If no "run" is present, it is a waste of time to fish any of the streams.

BASIC FACTS

1. You must obtain a fishing license. The fee for non-residents is $3.

2. The best time to fish fresh water pounds and streams is the evening or early morning. However, if the day is cloudy, fishing in fresh water is generally good.

3. You can fish salt water rivers any time of the day when the tide is suitable, but no fish are taken after sundown. Salt water fishing is fly-rod or spinner fishing. Bait does not work very well during the summer months. The tide is only suitable when it is low. Most fishermen fish during the first two or three hours of the rising tide or the last two or three hours of the lowering tide.

4. In the past few years, it has been found that the spinner method of fishing is very effective both in fresh water and in salt water rivers throughout the Province. Tourists will find that the lures which worked in other parts of Canada and the United States will bring good results in Island waters.

WHERE TO FISH

There are several hundred places to fish in this Province, and some, but not all of them, are listed below. All can be reached by way of some village or populated center located on the main highways. To reach any particular spot, the visitor has only to drive to one of the villages or towns listed and obtain directions from the people in the town or village. He will find them most co-operative.
