SOLOMON SLOW'S ADVICE.

What I Would Do, or Have Done, if I Were Boss

I would make the city police arrest all corner loafers.
I would see that the market square was kept clean.
I would summon and fine all merchants who persist in throwing waste paper on our streets.
I would have the city water cart handled something nearly about right.
I would keep half the railway wharf from floating away with some high tide.
I would not leave refuse, ashes and general dirt and rubbish on the north side of Queen Square.
I would see that people keep off the grass on the square.
I would have the Board of Health make a thorough examination of the pest hole. What pest hole? Well, there are others, but I mean the disgrace called the railway station.
Thanks, Brother Jonathan, of Summerside.
SOLOMON SLOW.

SIR CHARLES TUPPER.

About Three Thousand People Pay to Listen to the Chieftain.

HALIFAX, N. S., August 28.—Sir Charles Tupper is not a man whom a downpour of rain or anything disagreeable like that prevents from keeping an appointment, and when he is billed to speak in Halifax anything of this kind does not prevent a great crowd from going to hear him. This was demonstrated to-night, for before eight o'clock rain was falling steadily, and by nine there was a heavy downpour, yet between 2,000 and 3,000 people paid the admission fee of 25 cents to hear Sir Charles speak at a grand patriotic concert. The chieftain appeared on the band stand apparently in robust health and not one bit the worse of the accident in Amherst. He wore in his buttonhole a carnation and spoke in splendid form.

On the platform with him were Mayor Hamilton, T. E. Kenny, Sir Sanford Flemming, Hon. Premier Murray, R. T. Borden, M. P., B. Russell, M. P., ex-Mayor Keeffe and others.

A large representation of the twelve volunteers, who returned today from South Africa, headed by Color Sergeant Eustace, were there. The proceedings began with an address to the soldiers, on behalf of the city, and then a similar address to Sir Charles Tupper was read. Sir Charles was very happy in his reply. He thanked the city of Halifax for this opportunity of taking part in a demonstration in honor of our boys in South Africa, and for giving him a share in a movement to erect a memorial in Halifax in honor of their bravery. The war in South Africa was the most memorable event in British history since Confederation. No one event had transpired fraught with such momentous consequences as this war which had witnessed the brave yeomanry of Canada standing together, side by side, with equally brave men from the other great colonies, were fighting for the precious integrity of the British Empire. The greatness, the real unity of the British Empire had never before been so brilliantly attested as during this war in South Africa. That Empire, which was supposed to be merely a great naval power, had been able to transport an army of 200,000 men across 7,000 miles of ocean to South Africa, and brave men in Canada, Australia and New Zealand had by common consent sprung to arms and shown to the world that these great outlying portions of the empire, supposed to be vulnerable in case of war, had done yeoman service and really proved the invulnerability of the British empire. All classes, all sections of this country, of the whole empire, indeed, had shown that when occasion demands they are ready to stand shoulder to shoulder in defence of the integrity of the whole empire.

Sir Charles was proud to say that from the Queen, from Lord Roberts, from Sir Alfred Milner, and from every source, had come word that the sons of Canada, of Australia, of South Africa, of New Zealand, had honorably stood side by side with the bravest of the brave, and were not to be surpassed by any soldier in the British Empire. Sir Charles spoke of the pre-eminent services of Lord Strathcona, the greatest rendered by any one British subject for the maintenance of the empire's prestige. He told of that Canadian citizen whom he could not name, whose modesty was exceeded only by his patriotism, who had effected one million dollars' worth of insurance on the lives and limbs of our Canadian soldiers, and he praised the spirit of the Canadian people who had raised nearly $30,000 as a patriotic fund for the benefit of our absent soldiers. Kruger's mad folly had been the means of accelerating by thirty years the closer union of the British Empire; he had been the means of testifying to the civilized world that Britain's power is not confined to the home islands alone, but that all over the globe are men ready to spring to arms to defend British prestige and honor, no matter where these may be assailed. As a result of this war Krugerism must pass away, the Boers must have the civilization of the nineteenth and not of the seventeenth century. There must be equal rights for the white races in South Africa and safety and justice for the blacks. The British Empire stands before the world more resplendently grand than ever. To the brave yeomanry of Canada, who have shown their appreciation of the value of our glorious British institutions and their readiness to maintain them at any cost, are we indebted for the share Canada has taken in this great work. In the name of the great part he lead, in the name of the great whole country, he extended a hearty welcome home to the men who had come, and pronounced a cordial welcome to those yet to return.

To-night they will present "The Village Blacksmith" and tomorrow night "The Marble Heart."

POLICE COURT.—At the police court this morning the hearing of evidence in the case of Richard Collins occupied a couple of hours. Collins on Monday last assaulted a man named Neil McLeod, of St. Peter's, and the man was insensible from one of the blows received. The Stipendiary Magistrate therefore remanded the prisoner for trial at the next term of the Supreme Court.
