De Gasperi's Italian Government Overthrown

By ALLAN JACKS
ROME, (AP)—Foes of the left and right ganged up on Premier Alcide de Gasperi's new, pro-Western government in the Chamber of Deputies Tuesday and overthrew it, 262 to 260. Communists and Socialists Alcide de Gasperi's new, pro-Western government and Fascists to vote "no confidence" in de Gasperi in the precariously balanced Chamber. It was the first such defeat for the 72-year-old premier who has held the reins of Italy's governments continuously since Dec. 10, 1945. The new government, formed two weeks ago, was his eighth. De Gasperi needed 273 votes, or half the total 545 votes cast, to stay in office. Thirty-seven deputies, members of three small centre parties formerly allied with de Gasperi's majority Christian Democrat party, abstained. They could have provided the margin of victory. Eight members of the 500-seat Chamber were absent.

A., thirty-sixth Chief of Clan MacKinnon, who will officially open the annual field day and gathering of the Caledonia Club at Montague this afternoon. The present chieftain's visit to Canada is being made the occasion of a Clan MacKinnon Day at St. Anne, Cape Breton, on August 5, in the celebration of the Gaelic Mod. The MacKinnons claim descent from Alpine, King of the Scots in 837. The original habitat of the clan was Mull, where they held lands under the Lords of the Isles. They had also possessions in Strathardale, Skye, as early as 1594. They were closely associated with Iona in the 15th Century and John MacKinnon was the last Abbot. Ewen, who was chief of the clan in the 16th Century, received from the King a charter of the twenty Merklands of Meyness in Mull and the twenty Merklands of Strathardale in Skye. The clan was out in the year 1745, followed Prince Charles to England, and fought at Culloden. Their old chief was taken and after long imprisonment, died in 1766, leaving two sons and a daughter. Charles, his son, found the estates so burdened with debt that he had no part of them, and
