Chief Constables Ass'n Concludes

TORONTO (CP)—A motion calling for tighter control of lotteries and sweepstakes was passed Friday at the concluding session of the Chief Constables Association annual convention.

George Shea, director of investigation for the Canadian National Railways, said the association wants to "take the private profit out of lotteries."

The association said lotteries are good if conducted for and by a charitable organization. It asked strict licensing by each provincial government and suggested lotteries be confined to the province in which they originate.

A motion asking that capital punishment be retained also met with approval.

The association decided to change its name to the Canadian Association of Police Chiefs. Chief Robert Alexander of York township, a Toronto suburb, was elected president for next year and Verdon Mitchell, Halifax chief, first vice-president.

Canadian Morals Discussed Yesterday As United Church Sessions Continue

By RAE CORELLI Canadian Press Staff Writer SACKVILLE, N.B. (CP)—The United Church general council poked disapprovingly through Canadian morals Friday and applauded a layman who argued that its 3,000,000 adherents ought to steer voluntarily away from drinking and gambling.

William C. Scott of Valois, Que., spoke during the 16th assembly's consideration of the report of the board of evangelism and social service.

Evangelism and social service was one of the last boards to be heard from on the Friday agenda which saw the 375 lay and clerical delegates elect Dr. Ernest E. Long of Toronto to the powerful permanent secretaryship in a keenly contested election that went to four ballots.

CRITICIZES CLERGY

Mr. Scott criticized the United Church clergy for not preaching against the specific sins dealt with in the board report: gambling, narcotics, drinking and violation of the Lord's Day tenet.

The board keynoted its report by saying: "There is a determined attempt on the part of those interested in exploiting the weakness of our age to take full advantage of the unrest and moral uncertainty of their time, part of which is promoted by them and part of which is due to the tragedy of international discord, the apparently never-ending threat of war and all that goes with the character of our age."

It recommended church opposition to gambling which corrupts "everything it touches," urged that ministers vigorously prosecute a policy of "voluntary total abstinence," decried the "acute" evil of drug addiction and castigated narcotics peddlers as worthy of the "most severe penalties" of the law.

The board placed the church squarely behind the campaign to wipe out salacious literature which it viewed as another "evil influence." It teed off on lotteries for embodying everything from social cruelty to plain bad economics.

OPPOSES PROPAGANDA

The council approved a board resolution which condemned the "false standards" put forth by "the commercial propaganda of easy instalment buying" which gave the wrong impression that "almost anything can be obtained easily."

It also endorsed a second resolution which asked the federal government to seek fresh policies removing the economic necessity of mothers working instead of staying home with their children where they belonged.

Dr. Long will take over from Dr. George Dorey, also of Toronto, Jan. 1, 1955. Dr. Dorey will serve doing it myself because you, as a doctor, can see that I am very tired."

Since coming to Castel Gandolfo July 31, the pontiff has insisted on maintaining a program of private and general audiences despite the urging of his doctor that he rest.

Thursday he received Viscount Montgomery in a 50-minute private audience and then received a dozen courtiers in the courtyard of the summer residence.

These pilgrims had been told the pontiff, because he was tired, would limit himself to a few words and a blessing. Instead, he spoke at length and then addressed individual groups in English, Spanish, German, French, Portuguese and Italian.

Pope Not Fully Recovered From Serious Illness

(By Richard Ehrman) CASTLE GANDOLFO, Italy, (AP)—Tired from overwork, the Pope said Friday he is not yet fully recovered from the serious illness which struck him earlier this year.

The frail, 78-year-old pontiff, speaking to this reporter in the course of a general audience at the papal summer residence, explained that doctors had advised him that by November he should be fully recovered. He voiced the hope that his recovery will not take the long.

His private physician, Prof. Riccardo Galeazzi-Lisi, said Friday the Pope is suffering from fatigue due to a renewed heavy burden of work. But he said there had been no recurrence of the hiccups that weakened the pontiff dangerously during his grave gastric illness last winter.

CONTINUES AUDIENCES

The pontiff has given almost a score of audiences in the last 10 days—making six of them the occasion for major speeches. He sat as he spoke to 350 members of a medical conference Friday. His address lasted for about 15 minutes.

Before the audience, Prof. Adalberto Pazzini, president of the medical conference, was called aside and advised "not to keep the Pope too long; his conditions are not good."

At the conclusion of his speech, the Pope sat for several seconds, seemingly out of breath. The address, given in French, was read from typewritten sheets. Near the end, the Pope's hands shook slightly, and his voice at times faded.

When he was helped down the five steps from his throne the Pope gave a package of religious medals to Dr. Pazzini to distribute to the assembled doctors. Normally the Pope distributes the medals himself.

He told Dr. Pazzini: "I am not Duller there seemed to be a good chance of an accord. Duller was reported none to enthusiastic at first about Eden's proposal for an early meeting to discuss the situation."

Duller, Eden and Churchill also discussed what the United States and Britain should do in the event the French Parliament turns down any new agreed plan to rearm the Germans.

are temperamental about grabbing at everything they see.

It is a general impression that trout have been so consistently and heavily angled and generally persecuted this past few years that they have changed their strategy to a certain extent. They learn fast and remember their lessons.

Trout are not dumb. Thumping footsteps along streamside will put them on edge and they either leave the area fast or back into some hidden nook and lie doggo.

The men who had luck this season were those with infinite patience and who planned their moves.

A few days ago a fisherman complained to me about the luck of some anglers. He told me he fished one morning at the Big Brook with a companion. Both used Garden Hackles and lots of them. He caught nothing but his companion took home eight trout ranging in weight from three quarters to two pounds. They were taken in those places that were dug there last summer by a machine adapted to the purpose.

There is no point in heaving a blob of worms into a pool even if it is 7 or 8 feet deep with several big trout resting therein. I've watched some of them at work. They heave in the bait with a big splash and if action is not forthcoming in a matter of minutes its
