Province's Acadia Alumni Meet University President

A gathering of 100 persons comprised of members of the Prince Edward Island Associated Alumni of Acadia University and friends of Acadia, met at a dinner meeting last evening at the Confederation Centre to honor the newly-elected president of the University, Dr. J. D. M. Beveridge and heard his address touching on the problems and future plans of Acadia.

Dr. Athol Roberts was chairman and introduced the honorary chairman of the Acadia Development Fund for the province, Carl F. Burke. Mr. Burke welcomed the alumni and guests and spoke of the great contribution to higher education the university has made and is making in the Maritimes and the country generally.

Dr. Beveridge spoke of the increase in the student body of Acadia, the total having doubled in the last eight years.

"More and more high school graduates," he said, "are going on to university and it is anticipated that by 1977 Canadian universities will have tripled their enrolments. This growth creates problems of financing to provide facilities and teachers.

"Expansion must be limited to income and it would appear that government must take a greater responsibility if higher education is to keep pace with the economic and cultural needs of the country."

Paraphrasing the words of Sir Winston Churchill he said, "Give us the tools and we shall do the job."

The speaker was introduced by a fellow alumnus Gordon Bennett who spoke of the distinguished role Dr. Beveridge had played in the field of science particularly that of biochemistry and medicine and how his great gifts of mind and heart fitted him for the honored position as the tenth president of Acadia, a university with a century and a quarter of fruitful history.

Mr. Burke hoped that through the efforts now being made, Islanders would be made more aware of the university and what it has to offer and that more and more Island students would find their way to Wolfville for their higher education He was sure that the Island would rally to the financial support of the University as it has always done for worthwhile causes

FINE RESPONSE

Norman Moore, who directs the material development of the university, told of the fine response being made toward the objective of $7,250,000 and anticipated that the Island would easily realize its objective of $20,000.

Two vocal solos were sung by Mrs. Douglas McKenney accompanied by Mrs. Harvey MacKinnon and a group of Acadia music students under the direction of Prof. Leonard Mayo charmed the gathering with a variety of artistic and tuneful vocal numbers.

Allan MacMillan thanked the speaker and guest artists.

Acadia graduates from as far back as the class of 1910 and as recent as 1960 exchanged greetings and recalled their college days at Acadia.

The fund-raising effort in the province gets underway at once with Dr. Athol Roberts as general chairman, supported by a committee composed of members of the Alumni and friends of the university.

Additional Funds For Students Termed Adequate

Minister of Education, Dr. George Dewar said yesterday Prince Edward Island's share in the additional $8,900,000 in federal funds for student loans should be adequate to clear up outstanding loan applications.

In P.E.I. as of Nov. 3 there were 63 loans involving $41,430 still to be processed.

The minister said he was pleased to see that representations made by his department for an increase in funds was granted by the federal government.

He said the provincial government was prepared to assist students who had applied but funds were gone, except that the provincial assistance would not have been as large as the federal loan.

It is expected next year that the system for granting loans in this province will be notified. Dr. Dewar suggested that applications will have to be in by Sept. 30 and the loans may have to be scaled down to fit the amount available.

Finance Minister Gordon announced this week, an additional $8,000,000 will be appropriated to the fund so that outstanding applications can be processed.

SMALLWOOD

Mr. Smallwood said in a telephone interview in addition to the other conditions laid down by Quebec, Mr. Lesage said "the power must be delivered across the Labrador border on to Quebec soil and the sale of the power be made in Quebec province so that Quebec would get any tax advantages that might result from the sale being made on Quebec soil."

The Newfoundland leader said:

"Mr. Lesage informed me that these were his conditions for buying Labrador power.

"I rejected them contemptuously and this is mainly what drove Newfoundland to escape the clutches of Quebec."

executive assistant, Andre J. Letendre, had called Montreal Lawyer Pierre Lamontagne about the possibility of setting a bond for a man being held in Montreal for extradition to the United States in connection with narcotics charges.

The man held, Lucien Rivard, was being opposed in seeking bail by Mr. Lamontagne who represented the U.S. government in the case.

STATEMENT BY NIELSEN

It has been stated in the House by Erik Nielsen (PC—Yukon) Raymond Denis, former executive assistant to Mr. Tremblay, offered a $20,000 bribe to Mr. Lamontagne. He also said Mr. Favreau's former executive assistant, Guy Lord, phoned after the lawyer had rejected the bribe and threatened to cut off government legal work unless he went easy on the bail application.

Mr. Diefenbaker said none of the story would have come out had it not been for Mr. Nielsen. He accused Mr. Favreau and Mr. Tremblay of concealing pertinent facts, of covering up.

The government appointed a judicial inquiry Wednesday to look into the allegations but had made its terms too narrow to allow the depth and breadth of study needed of all the circumstances, Mr. Diefenbaker said.

The justice minister told the Commons after the charges were made by Mr. Nielsen he had perhaps acted naively, but after ordering an RCMP investigation of the lawyer's initial complaint he decided no charge could stand against Mr. Denis.

The judicial inquiry's terms of reference direct Chief Justice Frederic Dorion of the Quebec Superior Court to look into allegations about "improper inducements" connected with the case and whether "there is sufficient evidence to warrant any prosecution for offences that may be involved."

In the first major attempt to strike back at the opposition, Finance Minister Gordon threw his weight and that of Ontario MPs behind the two ministers from Quebec.

He lashed out at speculative news stories that Ontario MPs were demanding the prime minister discipline both ministers. The issue was being used to undermine national unity.

He drew loud desk-thumping from government benches when he said if Mr. Favreau were ever forced to resign for reasons of political expediency "I for one would not be happy to remain in this House."

Mr. Diefenbaker said he intends to ask that a motion moved several weeks ago to reduce the justice department spending estimates by the amount of Mr. Favreau's salary be voted on.

The motion did not come to a vote by the adjournment time. No announcement was made of today's business. By pre - arrangement all parties agreed to have estimates concluded by Friday when the House rises normally at 6 p.m. The estimates of 14 departments have been approved and eight, including justice, still require a vote.

STROKE: "Can This Killer Be Curbed?

It used to be thought that strokes occurred suddenly . . . without warning. Now doctors know that 3 out of 4 victims have been warned by "little strokes" . . . but didn't know it! Here are the symptoms . . . and what to do about them . . . plus some good news about rehabilitation for the millions of stroke survivors. body shell. Size limits guarantee that some lobsters are left on the grounds. Fishermen can then be assured of steadier landings rather than large scale fluctuations in their catches.

After summarizing other conclusions on which regulations are based, the booklet emphasizes that "the need for a conservationist attitude on the part of everyone involved is a pressing one because management of the fishery is about the only tool available. Lobsters are creatures of the wild and the stocks occupy thousands of square miles of open coastal waters. This makes it extremely difficult, if not impossible, to promote production and growth by improving environment, or to control in any way the natural changes that occur there."

Reiterating the department's conservation policy, the book let said regulations had the simple purpose of conserving the stock and protecting the fishermen and the industry. "We want fishermen to take the best possible catch each year, secure in the knowledge that they can take an equal catch in future years."

Lobster Conservation Booklet Issued By Dept. Of Fisheries

HALIFAX (Special) — "The Case for Lobster Conservation" is the title of a new booklet issued by the Department of Fisheries of Canada. It is designed to inform those engaged in the lobster fishing industry, and the public generally, the need for protecting this valuable fishery and the reasons for existing regulations.

Through the department's area headquarters in Halifax, the booklet will be distributed to thousands of lobster fishermen in the Maritime Provinces. It will also be available in limited quantities to teachers and others interested in the case for lobster conservation.

The booklet noted it strange that in such a profitable venture as the $20,000,000 annual Canadian Atlantic lobster fishery, some fishermen and processors failed to appreciate the actions of the federal department in trying to protect the stocks and maintain them at a level that would insure them a steady annual income.

Emphasizing that present regulations were for the lobster fishermen's own protection, the booklet provides information to enable lobstermen to understand why they should obey regulations. The department also hopes that this knowledge will help honest fishermen to work against those who continue to be critical of regulations and exploit the lobster stocks for immediate gain with no thought for the future

REGS. NOT PERFECT

While admitting that existing regulations might not be perfect, the department pointed out in the booklet that the regulations "do work for the benefit of those who fish lobster by maintaining a continuing resource from which a fisherman can take his catch." It was further added that as new knowledge was gathered and analyzed, it might be necessary to bring canges in the regulations. However, stress was made that such changes would only be made if they would bring about a continuing higher yearly level of catch.

Number one in the booklet's summary of economic and biological considerations upon which regulations are based, pertains to legal size limits. Sizes vary in lobster fishing districts ranging from 2½ inches to 3 3/16 inches carapace measure. This measurement is made from the eye-socket of the lobster to the end of the
