RIOTOUS DANNY KAYE IS 'THE INSPECTOR GENERAL'

Danny Kaye sweeps the screen in a riotous display of song and dance, clowning, and just plain acting, bringing his amazing versatility into full swing for Warner Bros.' long-awaited film, "The Inspector General".

"The Inspector General" is the play Danny Kaye has long wanted to make into a picture. Its theme of mistaken identity gives the talented entertainer his greatest chance at nonsense with a kick in it.

Portraying a not-too-smart barber in Walter Slezak's gypsy medicine show, Danny is forced out of town by victims of Slezak's nefarious business methods. He finds refuge in a graft-ridden village whose mayor mistakes him for the expected Inspector General and gives him a royal welcome. When Slezak shows up, anticipating a share in Danny's good fortune, the fireworks begin, never wanting right up to a smashing funny climax.

Musical highlight of the comedy is the "Solloquy For Three Heads," a quartet sung by the four heads of the one Danny Kaye. Sylvia Fine wrote the score, one of the most novel and unusual ever attempted on the screen.

For many years the lower cove was dotted with these paper-covered shanties heated with oil stoves, and there seated on an old packing box, with a foot placed on either side of a hole cut in the ice, sat the fisherman.

During the early fall when the run began the fishing looked promising but in a few days it became apparent that the run was over, and since then the head has been little fishing. On the average the daily catch was between fifteen and twenty pounds, where in former years the average was about one hundred pounds. The present factory price to the fishermen is 10 cents for gill net run, and 6 cents for bag net run, with the price varying according to other factors.

Smelt Run In Montague River Reported Poor

It was learned yesterday after contacting several smelt fishermen, that the smelt run in the Montague River was and is poor so that at the present time not a single net is being laid in the river.

luring the smelts with a piece of red wool, red yarn, or just the fin of another smelt. Luck was a varying thing, but it was not primarily the fish that counted, it was the yarns spun by the older fishermen when several would gather around the stove to warm themselves, eating lunch, and spinning the usual fishermen's tales. Perhaps not many were true, but one might, at least, appreciate the vivid imagination of the story teller, who could enlarge a fantastic tale from a grain of truth, "a tale well calculated to keep you in suspense."

Are those days gone forever? Let us hope not.

Double Hockey Bill At Montague Saturday Night

Montague Rink Saturday night was the scene of a double header hockey game between the West Kent girls and boys and the Montague High School girls and boys.

In the first game the local girls defeated the visitors 2-0 in a well fought game in which both teams held each other in check until the second period when Clair slipped through for the locals, all snipped in two counters. The locals held the skating edge throughout the game, which held the play in the opponents territory until the players finally capitalized to score the two goals.

The second game was an exchange scoring affair, with the visiting boys coming out on top 7-4. The local boys looked slow skating with the West Kent visitors, who attacked constantly and worked unceasingly to get the puck in the net. The locals, however, put up a strong defence, and Clements in the local net was a stalwart defence against the attacks of the visiting squad.

Stresses Maritime Needs In House Of Commons

Following is the official Hansard report of the address given in the House of Commons on Feb. 13 by Mr. T. J. Kitcham, Liberal member for King's, of which a summary appeared in The Guardian last week:

"In rising to take part in this debate I wish first to join in the expressions of sympathy tendered to the families of the late J. L. Douglas and J. E. Matthews, Of Mr. Douglas I can say, as the hon. member for Prince (Mr. MacNaught) said, that he ever extended a kind, sympathetic and helpful hand. In my close personal association with him I found him always putting forth ardent efforts for the welfare of his constituency and the Province he loved.

"I should like to make a few comments on the railway strike of last year. We in our Province were severely affected by that strike, because of our insular position. The terms of union guaranteed us unbroken transport communication. The Federal Government placed in the hands of the Canadian National management the operation of the ferry boats connecting Prince Edward Island with the mainland.

"When the railway strike was called the two ferries operating were tied up at the docks. After frantic negotiation carried on by Premier Jones, the Prime Minister (Mr. St. Laurent) and the Minister of Transport (Mr. Chevrier), the spokesman for the railway union, Mr. Hall, finally condescended to permit one ferry to operate until the strikers went back to work.

A Critical Stage

"It seems to me that we have arrived at a critical stage in the economic life of our Province when the leaders of labour unions can

Georgetown Wins Southern King's Semi-finals

The Georgetown Eagles flew into the den of the Murray Harbour Bruins on Thursday night and when they flapped their wings towards their home nest, they carried in their claws the semi-final series victory by a 6-2 score. The Eagles had won the first encounter by a 7-3 score and now go on to meet Montague in the league finals. Playing short several of their regular players the Eagles took advantage of hard ice and hit a fast clip throughout. The first session ended 3 to 0, in the Birds' favour.

In the middle session the Bruins punched in two counters, while the Eagles went scoreless. In the curtain closer the Eagles duplicated their first period feat of netting three counters, to their opponents' none, to make the final count read 6-2.

The intermediate playoffs between Montague Meteors and the Eagles are scheduled to start on Tuesday, Feb. 20th, which might cause a delay in the final series for
