

Fire Destroys Farm House

Fire destroyed the dwelling house of Allen Shepherd, Seven Mile Road, on Monday night. The fire was first discovered by Raymond Rice, who on arrival burst in the door to save some household effects, but was driven back by the flames which were consuming the whole interior of the house. Mr. Shepherd was away from home at the time of the fire. A large number gathered, but owing to the rapid spread of the fire, they were unable to save anything. It is understood that there was no insurance.

WEEKLY POTATO BULLETIN — The weather has been characterized by high humidity and frequent showers since the middle of July and these conditions are ideal for the initiation of a late blight attack, reports the Science Service Laboratory. Although the disease has been found in very few fields, it is possible that traces of it are present in many areas. It is therefore recommended that spraying or dusting be carried out at the first opportunity. Colorado potato beetle larvae are quite numerous in many areas and the second brood of potato flea beetles will be abundant within a few days. Growers are therefore advised to include DDT in spraying or dusting operations so that defoliation from insects may be kept to a minimum.

LEAVES BY PLANE FOR BOLIVIA TO INSPECT MISSION FARM OPERATIONS

Dr. J. A. Clark, former superintendent of the Experimental Farm here, is leaving tomorrow morning by plane en route to La Pas, Bolivia on a visit to the Canadian Baptist Foreign Mission work in that country. He is commissioned especially to visit the Peniel Hall Farm to study conditions there and to try to discover how the farm can be made more of a demonstration and experimental farm than it is today.

This is the farm to which Rev. L. Neil Vickerson went in 1923, but death from peritonitis the following year overtook him four months after he arrived and while he was studying the Spanish language.

The air trip will take Dr. Clark to six countries. After several changes of planes he will spend Friday night in New York where he will meet his daughter, Miss Elma M. Clark, who will be returning that day from visiting various Canadian and Bermuda cities. On Saturday Dr. Clark will fly to Jamaica, spending the night at Montega Bay or Kingstown. He will be at Caracas, Venezuela, the following day and spend a week there leaving on Saturday, August 7, on a flying trip to Panama City and from there to Lima, Peru, before going to La Pas on Monday.

The farm which he will inspect is the one which Rev. L. Neil Vickerson established in 1923.

LOFTY SITUATION

The elevation of this section is over 12,000 feet and many of the crops and vegetables grown there are similar to those grown here. The main crops are wheat, oats, barley and potatoes, and some similar conditions are noted in that while the ground does not freeze, frost does occur. The nights are cold and the ground remains cold even through the

Slaughter

Some 2000 birds were slaughtered, at a cost to the government of $2,420,000. Since then, there have been scattered cases in various parts of Britain. The report Wednesday said that birds, mainly starlings and seagulls, probably were largely responsible for bringing the infection into the country from continental Europe, but it also suggested the virus might be carried by the wind under certain conditions.

The committee said the disease could quickly establish itself as endemic in any country that failed to take vigorous measures against it. If this happened in Britain, it said, the result would be a national calamity.

FANTASTIC IDEA "Any idea that in present circumstances it would be possible to get rid of the slaughter policy by making the whole susceptible livestock population—or even all cattle—immune by vaccination is in the realm of fantasy," it reported.

The committee said there are many varieties of the foot and mouth disease virus, and vaccines effective against one type gave little protection against others.

The committee approved the vaccination of animals in areas adjoining a severe epidemic region
