

Chinese Are Appearing In Strength In Tanzania

The AP world spotlight this week describes a new face that is appearing in Tanzania. It also reports on the forthcoming election in Japan and on the political situation in the Honduras.

ZANZIBAR, Tanzania (AP)—New faces are appearing in this East African territory of Tanzania—the unsmiling faces of the Chinese. And it appears they are preparing for a long stay.

Chinese Premier Chou En-lai's visit this month momentarily pulled aside a tightly drawn Chinese curtain.

For the first time, large numbers of Communist Chinese diplomats, advisers, technicians and embassy staff appeared in public and were quick to start rubbing shoulders with their African counterparts. No longer could Tanzanian politicians deny their presence. Their entry into Africa was no longer rumor — there were scores of them on the mainland and on the palm-fringed, India Ocean island of Zanzibar.

Chinese-armed Tanzanian soldiers displayed their weapons in public for the first time and thousands of Chinese flags fluttered above giant portraits of Chou.

PROVIDES STEPPING STONE Just 20 minutes of flying time from the mainland capital of Dar es Salaam is the spice island of Zanzibar. China's stepping stone to the African continent.

Tanzania is the result of union of the former British-ruled territory of Tanganyika and the islands of Zanzibar and Pemba. Insurgent forces swept into power on Zanzibar Island, ousting the sultan, just a month after independence.

Once a dusty but romantic stop-over for tourists, Zanzibar today is an armed fortress. Visitors are discouraged.

Goose-stepping, 10-year-old girls dressed in Cuban-style uniforms and tall pillbox headgear strut alongside their gun-toting sisters and mothers.

They form a massive volunteer liberation army on this island of only 640 square miles. An estimated 5,000 Africans make up the regular island army. Well-trained, strictly disciplined and equipped with Russian and Chinese arms, they rank among the best black forces in Africa.

By accepting Chinese friendship overtures, together with military and economic aid totaling $44,800,000, President Julius K. Nyerere has paved the way for direct Chinese assistance to the many revolutionary movements seeking to throw the white governments of Rhodesia, Mozambique, Angola and the most hated white spot of all—South Africa.

TOKYO (AP)—Japanese voters elect 127 members of the upper house July 4 in Premier Eisaku Sato's first real test of popularity since he took office eight months ago.

No one doubts that Sato's Liberal-Democratic party will retain its majority and preserve the virtually unbroken conservative domination of national affairs since 1946. But Viet Nam, the rising cost of living, and government corruption are issues on which the opposition could make gains.

In Japan's upper house, the 250 members serve six-year terms, and half the body plus vacancies, come up for election every three years.

A total of 328 candidates are running, 223 from prefectural constituencies and 99 from the nation at large. The Liberal-Democrats have 55 candidates. Seventy-five of the 144 seats they hold are at stake in next Sunday's balloting.

OTHERS ALSO RUN Other party candidates, with the number of their seats at stake and the number now held in parentheses: Socialists 65 (29-65); Komeito (Soka Gakkai) 14 (4-13); Democratic-Socialists 21 (6-9); Communists 46 (2-3); minor parties 36 (2-4); Independents 52 (1-5).

The government reports 60,029,522 Japanese will be eligible to vote.

Competition is greatest in Tokyo, where 20 candidates are running for four seats. But another reason for the focusing of attention on the capital was the recent dissolution of the Tokyo metropolitan assembly because of bribery and corruption scandals that have tarnished the Liberal-Democratic party image.

Political experts feel the corruption issue, plus the Viet Nam war, in which there is Japanese sympathy for the Viet Cong may help the left-wing parties pick up several seats.

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP)—Gen. Oswaldo Lopez Arellano, who denied any interest in a political career when he led a military coup here Oct. 3, 1963, settled down this month to start a six-year presidential term.

Although the political situation for the 44-year-old general's term is placid at the moment, the future is uncertain.

The Liberal party, whose President Ramo Villeda Morales was overthrown by the 1963 coup, is busy reorganizing its strength. The new Liberal party chief, Carlos Roberto Reina, said in an interview the party is in firm opposition to the new government.

Lopez Arellano was backed for the presidency by the Nationalist party—but not all of it.

Nevertheless, Lopez Arellano has the important and apparently unified support of Honduran armed forces of 7,200 men.

Dr. Gen. Armando Escalon who aided Lopez Arellano in the 1933 coup and was subsequently named defence minister during the period of military government, has been replaced and removed from active duty. Reliable reports say Escalon opposed the idea of the general taking over the constitutional presidency. Escalon has retired to private life.

After the 1963 coup, the military regime of Lopez Arellano took over full power. It called a session for a national constituent assembly last February. The announced result of the races for 64 seats in the assembly gave the Nationalists 25 and the Liberals 29. The Liberals charged frauds robbed them of victory and two Liberals refused to take their seats in the assembly. The seats went to the Nationalists, giving them a 37-27 margin.

The assembly began its sessions March 16. It wrote a new constitution, decided to convert itself into a national congress and gave itself power to elect the next constitutional president. The man: Gen. Lopez Arellano. The new government took office June 6.
