stationary. The feeling of heart-felt thanks as the first showers awakened the heat scorched land has now turned to one of alarm as there seems to be no sign in the offing that the water taps will be turned off.

A heavy percentage of a bumper crop of clover has already been written off and thousands of tons of timothy have been lost. This week I watched hundreds of coils go up in smoke that meandered in a black pall across the farmlands.

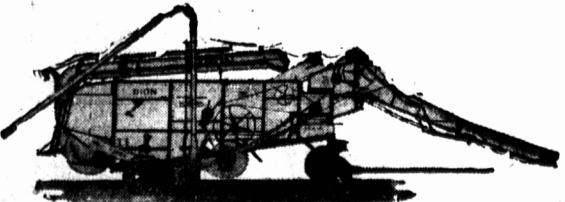

Sometimes I wonder if our weather is not changing. I remember in the days when I was young after many farmers would save a hundred tons of hay individually without the loss of a single coil with no hay fork...

An angler of my acquaintance hooked into a whale of a sea trout this week. He told me he has landed trout, not many of course, that edged four pounds but never before tangled with a baby that packed this one's poundage.

Rainbow trout have been taken in mill dams that are equipped with a by-pass. No real large ones but in the one pound bracket and a 16 oz. rainbow is lightning fast and full of fight.

Rumour has it that a strange animal has been shot recently in the Lot 65 district. No one seems to know what it is, or was, but from the description given by one whose father is said to have viewed the remains it's a cross between a bear and something that dropped from Mars.

"DAVY JACK'S COFFIN"

This is a brief tale of adventure and heroism that occurred about one hundred years ago at Cavendish, on the north shore of Prince Edward Island.

Davy Jack lived with his widowed mother, his brother Willie and two sisters, some miles inland on the Cavendish Road. He had often been to the shore at Cavendish, where there were several boat-ways and quite a number of fishing shanties.

Davy asked his brother Willie, J. H. Fletcher (the master of the Cavendish school, a lad in his teens) and Mr. Gillespie with whom the master boarded, to go with him on his first sail, on a Saturday when there was no school.

So the schoolmaster remained as part of the crew. They waded out and climbed aboard a boat that looked comfortable and clean, even if she did leak considerably.

refused to obey the helm and just stalled. After many tries, the captain decided to "wear her around", and while this was being accomplished, they had drifted about two miles out to sea.

After a council of war had decided they should wear the boat around again and try for Lockerby's Cove, the forecast halyard jammed in the block when they tried to lower the sail.

Word of the Jack's adventure was spread far and wide. Signal fires were built on the cliffs, and men, women and children gathered on the shore.

Just before noon on Sunday, they caught sight of a Yankee fishing schooner that saw their flag of distress and gave them a line which they made fast to the boat.

CROCKER COMBINATION WINDOWS AND DOORS

Anodized extruded aluminum is the ideal metal for combination windows. It prevents pitting, checking and discoloration. Only an anodized window affords positive protection against the corrosive action of moisture and salt water.

This electrical anodizing process converts and hardens the aluminum to a permanent, distinctive and beautiful satin finish.
