AFTER MONTAGUE PAY PARADE

Major B. H. Yeo is pictured as the head table during the annual Christmas dinner of the "B" Squadron P. E. I. Regiment, held at the Hillside Inn, Montague, Friday night. Previous to the dinner the squadron attended pay parade at the armories in which only one member was absent. Major Yeo welcomed the group and expressed his regret that he had missed the opportunity of military training. Col. K. M. Johnston, left, commander of No. 2 Militia Group, expressed the hope that the present militia cut-back would not affect the unit. Lt.-Col. D. J. MacCormack also advised them there is always room for improvement. Others at the head table were: Major W. S. Veale, Major G. Halliwell, RSM H. J. Coffin, Lieut. P. Hoy, Lieut. J. J. Sark, WO2 A. J. LeClair and Capt. G. Wellner.

Demonstration Given With Language Lab.

With a number of education officials, high school principals and teachers as observers Robert J. LeClair, head of the French department at Prince of Wales College, Thursday morning gave a demonstration of conversational French being taught with the aid of a "language lab" loaned by the General School Equipment Co. of Halifax.

The four-step demonstration illustrated not only the use of the equipment in language instruction, but in teaching subjects such as biology and mathematics as well.

Mr. LeClair said that a 21-unit lab would cost $15,000. Each unit of the lab contains a tape recorder, microphone, headset, and writing surface. The first step of the demonstration saw the units used for French dictation. Two students, Dorothy Rawek and Lynda Jay, sat on the headsets, turned on the recorders, and took the dictation from the machine.

Mr. LeClair pointed out that the method can be used in schools where there is no teacher.

Salary Increase Asked For Lieut. Governors

A bill designed to raise the salaries of the 10 lieutenant-governors of the Canadian provinces and a number of government commission members, was introduced in the House of Commons Friday by the government. Under the proposed increases, the lieutenant-governors of Ontario and Quebec, $29,000 and the other seven $18,000. While the Dominion government pays the salary of the lieutenant governor, the provincial government bears the cost of operation of the Government House even heavier enticement in the past. The estimates for 1969 list an amount of $8,900 allotted to Government House, but there was no breakdown of that in the expenses and maintenance. While the post of lieutenant-governor has long been considered an honorary one, it has been generally agreed that the incumbent need to be a man of independent means, as the cost of entertainment during a term has generally far exceeded the salary paid. This has been pointed out several times, as calling for a revision, especially for the coming centennial year, where Government House will be expected to carry an even heavier entertainment in the past. Officers Elected, Installed For Royal Black Preceptory

The Royal Black Preceptory selected a new slate of officers recently and the installation ceremony at the annual meeting held in the L.O.L. rooms on Kirkwood Drive. The new executive is as follows: Harold MacKie, worshipful preceptor; Earl Carter, deputy preceptor; James Coles, immediate past president; John T. Campbell, chaplain; Arthur MacMicken, recording registrar, and Gordon Ross, treasurer.

Howard MacKinnon was elected first lecturer; Albert Murphy, second lecturer; Loria Drake, first censor; James Crabbe, second censor; Donald Drake, first standard bearer; Russell Matheson, second standard bearer; Surgeon Moore, pursuivant; Wynston Drake, Tyler, with John Poole, C.D., MacPhail and James MacFadyen.

Commenting on the debate Rev. M. R. Pucklington stated that parents and teachers should encourage children to speak before audiences so they will be able to take their places in society.

Temple MacDonald also stressed the importance of children speaking publicly, so that later on in life they will not be afraid to express their opinions, be they right or wrong. As a result of discussion, it was moved by Mrs. Alice Arsenault and seconded by Temple MacDonald that fire drill be held every two weeks for pupils and teachers in the school.
