SEPTEMBER AFFAIR IS HAILED AS STIRRING FILM

What happens when a strange twist of fate suddenly gives a lovely girl and a lonely man the chance to break all ties with the past and embark on a new life together? This is the challenging situation confronting Joan Fontaine and Joseph Cotten in Paramount's Hal Wallis production, "September Affair," now playing at the Capitol Theatre, and the ensuing love affair makes for one of the most arresting and haunting stories ever filmed.

Francoise Rossy, continental film favorite, co-stars in this unusual tale of an exciting and poignant love, and Jessica Tandy heads the line cast of featured players. Miss Fontaine and Cotten meet casually in a plane bound from Rome to New York. She is a concert pianist who had been studying in Italy. He is an engineer who has been professionally successful, but finds that his marriage is going on the rocks. When their plane lands at Naples, they tour the town and return after it has left. It soon crashes at sea and they are listed among the passengers lost.

Now in love, they can either return to their former lives or continue the deception. Their decision is to remain together, and they have an idyllic romance in capri and Florence. But the inexorable past soon claims them and they are forced to come to terms with reality. The solution of their problem is reached in a taut and stirring climax that will do strange things to your heart.

Travelling Conditions in S'side Tough

A northerly wind of from 20 to 40 miles per hour yesterday transformed a four-inch snow fall into a blizzard. In some places the snow was four feet high.

The same storm early yesterday morning had blocked all the streets in Summerside, and although a snow plow was in action quite early, most persons who normally travel by car were forced to walk to work.

By late afternoon most of the streets had been opened for traffic by the plow, but most motorists experienced great difficulty due to the drifting snow, and almost all who ventured out in their cars had the unpleasant experience of having their cars stuck in snow. Two large trucks, a light delivery, and a car were all stuck in snow at one time in front of the Guardian Office on Summer Street about 8 a.m. yesterday; and two buses loaded with air force personnel and civilian employees of the air station, both burned out clutches within the town in trying to proceed to the airport, through the snow.

All flights at the R.C.A.F. Station were canceled, and it is understood that all buses of the Summerside office of the I.M.T. were cancelled. The storm abated considerably in the late evening. However, there was unusually light motor traffic on the streets. Although transportation was temporarily hampered, the Telephone Office indicated that all normal circuits were working and that no damage had been reported.-S.

Discussed Coal Shortage With Prince County Member

The various aspects of the extreme coal shortage on Prince Edward Island were discussed in a general discussion Monday morning between J. Watson MacNaught, M.P., and representatives of two of the largest coal companies on the Island.

He promised he would take the matter up with the authorities of Dosco and other coal companies in Montreal; and if that is not satisfactory he would discuss the coal shortage with Hon. C. D. Howe, M. P., Minister of Trade and Commerce.

Mr. MacNaught also expressed the hope that something would materialize to ease the situation, which is quite serious throughout the Island.

A representative of one of the firms reported that they had not had a pound of coal in their stock bins for three months, and stated that when a car of coal comes in it is usually unloaded in small lots within two or three hours to a waiting list of customers.

In an effort to supply urgent demands for coal, this firm reports they have even depleted the supply of coal that they had on hand for their own use. They say also, that the existing shortage does not seem to show any signs of improving.

A representative of the other coal company stated that his company did not have a pound of coal on hand, and that the situation was so bad that they pretty near had to buy anything that was black.

He commented on the various reasons for the shortage, among which he listed, (1) the stoppage of work at some mines for various legitimate reasons, (2) the holiday season just past, (3) a large industrial demand, (4) increased defence production, (5) the demand for considerable amounts of coal at the Wabana iron mines in Newfoundland, which is producing iron ore for steel plants at Sydney and other points, which, themselves, require large amounts of coal. (6) Many farmers now add to the big demand for coal because in many cases they cannot secure labor to help get out firewood, (7) the closing of the Allan shaft which produced about 660 tons a day which was lost when this shaft closed.

He said that the smaller mines have been doing their very best to help out during this scarcity but their production is naturally limited.

He said that Hon. C. D. Howe, and also the coal dealers in this province, through public advertisements had many months ago warned people to secure their winter supply of coal, and unfortunately many persons had not heeded this suggestion.

Reports from Alberta indicated dealers there had no coal stocks on hand at present.
