

Khrushchev's Ouster Originally Set For July

LONDON (AP) — The Observer said here the secret police ousted Nikita Khrushchev as Soviet leader last month in a carefully laid plot originally intended to take place in July.

A front-page story by the paper's diplomatic staff listed Alexander Shelepin, former chief of the secret police, and Vladimir Semichastnyy as now heads of the KGB (state security committee), as leaders.

Shelepin has just received a top Communist party post and is considered one of the two or three most powerful men in Russia.

The Observer said these leaders of the plot brought Leonid Brezhnev, now Communist party premier, into the scheme by promising them the jobs they now hold—but on a strictly temporary basis.

Khrushchev, the story went on, now is living under house arrest in an apartment building with a blood clot on the brain.

May 4, 1963 and has been incapacitated since. He is no longer a member of the party presidium of central committee.

When all preparations were complete in mid-October, Khrushchev was summoned to Moscow for the fateful meeting of the presidium. The plotters' moment of triumph came when the coup had already called to Moscow a carefully chosen quorum of the committee and Khrushchev was immediately taken before the committee, waiting in a nearby Kremlin room, for the vote against him.

Tank Bursts, Oil Is Lost At Geo'town

GEORGETOWN — A considerable quantity of oil was lost Wednesday morning when the end blew out of a 3,000-gallon oil storage tank at the Irving Oil storage site on the Kent Street entrance to Georgetown.

At the time of the accident, the six storage tanks, pooled together in groups of two, were filled from a large tank truck.

No explanation for the incident could be given, but the company is investigating to see whether a defective air vent could have caused it.

An accurate estimate of the amount of oil lost cannot be made until recent sales figures are checked and the two tanks joined together are gauged.

Ship Grounded In City Harbor

An attempt to move the tanker MV Belfast from a shoal in Charlottetown Harbor will be made at 10 a.m. tomorrow by an Imperial Oil official said late last night.

The 500-ton Norwegian ship became grounded here Wednesday when the winds shifted and she was blown back onto the east side of the shoal.

She was never considered in any danger at any time, it was stated, and an attempt was made to move her at 9:30 last night. This was abandoned because of continued high winds and the fact the tide did not rise high enough. Imperial Oil officials said late yesterday.

The vessel arrived in harbor Tuesday evening and had to the strong winds sweeping Charlottetown and the rest of the Maritimes, she was anchored at 10 a.m. tomorrow near the old Marine Wharf.

Originally she was due to berth in Charlottetown early Tuesday morning, but the storm forced her to tie up in the Northumberland Strait near the entrance of the channel through Hillsborough Bay until late Tuesday afternoon.

She was brought into the harbor under the guidance of the pilot Jack MacDonald, but on nearing her berth her skipper, Capt. Martinus Ingebrigtsen decided that wind conditions were such that it would be safer to wait until high tide Wednesday morning before her alongside.
