Tests Of Physical Fitness Are Snowballing In U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — It began as a relative uncomplicated White House - Marine Corps rivalry over physical fitness.

Now it bulged into a contest among President Kennedy's assistants — with a showdown scheduled for next Friday.

First of all, Press Secretary Pierre Salinger announced he would lead volunteers from the White House press corps on a hike along a canal towpath starting at 7 a.m. Feb. 15.

Salinger acted because of Kennedy's recent suggestion that a group of Marine officers made a 50-mile hike to see if they meet a fitness test prescribed in 1908 by President Theodore Roosevelt. Fourteen officers did it Friday at Oceanside, Calif., in 18 hours, 44 minutes.

In the light of this, Salinger said "the situation has reached a point where there's going to have to be some demonstration of physical fitness by the press-secretary."

Salinger also reported that Kennedy was taking a personal interest in a report that his air force aide, Brig-Gen. Godfrey McHugh, was ready to hike 50 miles in a day. Kennedy suggested McHugh and the two other military aides at the White House join the Salinger entourage next Friday.

ISSUES CHALLENGE

McHugh then announced that the military aides and other volunteers from the White House staff would make the hike. He said Salinger could go along—"if he can keep up the pace."

The air force general indicated it would be an endurance hike, to see who could stay on his feet the longest.

The portly Salinger, asked how many miles he was expected to walk, replied:

"Well, until I give out, so I don't think you have to worry. I have a feeling we won't have too far to go."

McHugh willingly posed for photographers while walking along the White House driveway at a brisk pace.

Salinger, asked to do the same, declined.

"You're trying to get me to exert myself before the big effort," he said.

The press secretary, 37, and 185 pounds, said he began training for the event Thursday by walking 1½ blocks to a hotel near the White House. He said he planned to extend the distance gradually, day by day.

Someone suggested that the White House staffers temper their burst of enthusiasm for fitness by recalling the fate of Pheidippides.

He wah the gentleman of Athens who inaugurated the marathon race by running to enlist the aid of the spartans against a Persian invasion of Greece in 490 BC. Once the battle was won, Pheidippides raced 22 miles to Athens with the news. "Rejoice, we conquer!" cried Pheidippides, and dropped dead.

PRISONER GETS OUT TO MARRY

TORONTO (CP) — Edmund Warren, 28, got married here—and three minutes later went back to jail.

Warren was remanded in custody last week for sentencing after being convicted of possession of stolen goods.

He was brought from the cellblock to suburban Willowdale courthouse briefly Friday and Salvation Army Brig. John Patterson performed the wedding ceremony.

Wilson Favored To Win Top British Labor Post

By FRASER WIGHTON

LONDON (Reuters) — Harold Wilson, a 46-year-old intellectual who made his name as a youthful prodigy in Britain's opposition labor party, is hotly favored to become the party's leader next week.

In a first ballot for a leader to succeed the late Hugh Gaitskell, Wilson came within eight votes of outright victory in a three-cornered race with George Brown, 48, deputy party leader, and James Callaghan, 50, Labor's "shadow" treasury chief.

The result, announced Thursday of voting by members of the parliamentary labor party, gave Wilson 115 votes against 88 for Brown and 41 for Callaghan.

To be elected outright, Wilson needed more votes than the combined total of his two rivals.

The election regulations stipulated that if the fight ended indecisively, the candidate polling the fewest votes would drop out to clear the way for a straight fight between the other two.

The labor legislators have until Thursday to cast their votes in this deciding ballot.

The pipe - smoking, stocky Wilson has remained silent on the contest.

MINISTER AT 31

A former university don who made history by becoming at 31 the youngest cabinet minister in modern British political times, Wilson has had a career full of surprises.

Long before his cabinet experience — as board of trade president in the post-war labor administration of Clement Attlee—he was being talked about as a political phenomenon.

A Yorkshireman, Wilson had a brilliant Oxford University career. He came into Parliament in 1945 on the crest of the labor landslide and almost immediately was given government office as parliamentary secretary to the works ministry, a job he held for two years.

The elimination of Callaghan left the leadership fight between Wilson, who has the strong support of the left wing of the party and the respect of its central elements, and Brown, who is strong with "rightist" members and the nearly 100-strong trade union group of labor MPs.

Though he polled 27 votes fewer than Wilson in the first ballot, he now is expected to pick up a considerable number of votes given earlier to Callaghan, whose backing was thought to come mainly from centre and right-of-centre sources.

The bidding:

Pass	1 ♠	Pass	1 NT
Pass	2 ♦

Opening lead—ace of clubs.

Most bids and plays you make in bridge are clear -cut, and there is only one proper choice to make in a given situation. But, unfortunately, there are times when what you should do is not at all clear, when the answer is neither black nor white, but decidedly gray. If these hands bother you, don't feel lonesome; you've got plenty of company.

Look at this hand, played between France and the United States in 1956. Jais, South for France at the first table, opened the bidding with a spade. (He and Trezel were playing "canape" style—namely, bidding the shorter suit first.)

The bid placed West (Stayman) in an awkward position. He could double and risk a diamond response from partner, or make a risky two club bid, or pass and await developments. Stayman chose to pass.

North responded one notrump. East (Solomon) passed and South bid two diamonds, which everybody passed. East might have tried three clubs over two diamonds, but he really didn't have much of a hand. West opened the ace of clubs and Trezel made eleven tricks, scoring 150 points for France.

This was the bidding at the second table, with an American pair North-South:

East	South	West	North
3 ♣	Dble.	4 NT	Pass
5 ♣	Pass	Pass	Dble.

East (Ghestem) opened with three clubs. South (Kahn) had a problem of sorts; whether to overcall with three diamonds or double for takeout, having support for the major suits. He doubled.

West (Bacherich) said four notrump and then passed the five club response North (Goren) doubled five clubs.

South led the king of diamonds and shifted to a heart, but East played the hand well and made five clubs doubled for a score of 750 points. France gained 900 points on the deal.

There were close decisions at both tables, but France managed to get the best of the exchange.
