The Ruling Passion.

A celebrated musical critic was recently married in church, and after the ceremony, as the wedding procession marched down the aisle, the organist played the wedding march from "Lohengrin." When near the door, the bridegroom stopped in the march and addressed the wondering assembly thus: "I know I am committing a breach of etiquette as well as propriety in doing this, but I am not to blame. It is my mental organization which has become ineffably sensitive by reason of the critical nature of my duties." Then he drew from the pocket of his dress coat a well thumbed copy of the score of "Lohengrin." Opening it at the march, he went over to the organist and said: "What offended my ear was the fact that in the seventeenth bar of the da capo passage you flatted very badly, and in the andante movement you slurred the appoggiatura. Now," putting his finger upon the passage, "let us try that again." Once more the organ pealed forth, and this time the player, conscious that the great critic was listening to him, accomplished his duty with credit to himself and to the great satisfaction of the critic.—Pick Me Up.

A Postol Joke. A west slder recently approached a certain postoffice official. His face was serious; so was his voice. "Say," he said, "I don't think it's right for you to make your letter carriers do double duty."

"What do you mean?" exclaimed the official. "Why, we've got a carrier over our way who is at it day and night." "At what?" "Why, he carries mails all day, and then has an extra male to carry at night." The official looked puzzled. "That's queer," he said. "I'll inquire into it." Then his face brightened up. "Hold on," he cried. "What does that night mail weigh?" "About nine pounds," said the citizen with a hoarse chuckle. The official grinned. "Guess he'll have to stand it," he said. "It's just a short route, you know."

Blind Devotion. The blind devotion with which an old servant did his duty was illustrated on one occasion when his master had a dinner party. During the dinner Henry was very nervous and made two or three blunders. His master showed his annoyance and cast angry glances at his servant, but the poor man could not settle quietly to his work. At last, when the dessert had been placed quietly on the table, he stole timidly behind his master's chair and said: "Please, sir, can you spare me now? My house has been on fire for the last hour and a half!"—London Answers.

Curzon's Bad Writing. It is said of Mr. George Curzon, the governor general of India, that his handwriting became quite illegible at one period of his Oxford career. At this time he wrote two letters, one to a relative, one to a chum with whom he always discussed the faults of their respective relations, and accidentally put these letters into the wrong envelopes. He was about to write a profound apology to his relative when he received the following note from him: "Can't read a word of your four pages, but guess you want some money, you young rascal." Inclosed was a handsome "tip."

An Actor's Coolness. An actor who was playing Claude Melnotte lost his memory to such an extent in the scene where he makes love to Pauline and describes the imaginary villa by the lake of Como that the prompter was obliged to come to his relief and recite the whole passage in a loud voice. Claude, however, was cool enough to do his part by saying, "Tell me, dearest, you like the picture"—turning to the prompter—"which this gentleman has been kind enough to submit to your consideration?"—Nuggets.

A Clever Manager. The Groom (very wealthy)—Why did you marry an ordinary chap like me? The Bride—I haven't the slightest idea. Mamma managed the whole affair.—Harlem Life.

A Correction. "We stated," says the Plunkville Bugle, "that the gent now playing Othello at the opera house let his hands hang around like a couple of miniature hams. He called on us yesterday in regard thereto. With assistance of the pressman and the shoemaker who occupies the room adjoining the Bugle office we ejected him, but not until he had landed on us with a hand that showed the use of the word 'miniature' to have been a serious mistake."—Indianapolis Journal.

He Was Slow. They had been "keeping company" for eight years, and, when he finally proposed and was accepted, in the ardor of his enthusiasm he exclaimed, "Darling, you are worth your weight in gold!" With almost cruel facetiousness she replied, "That is saying a good deal, for it was an awful long wait."—Richmond Dispatch.

What the Prisoner Said. A celebrated judge was once trying a case where the accused could only understand Irish, and an interpreter was accordingly sworn. The prisoner said something to the interpreter, and the latter replied. "What does he say?" demanded the judge. "Nothing, my lord."

A Health Giving Plant. The London Graphic counsels the use of verberna as a sedative. The specially healthful and invigorating qualities of this plant were well known to the Romans, who crushed some of its leaves between their palms after the bath and anointed themselves freely with it. It is very good for brain workers to inhale its perfume, and the old fashioned cottage practice of growing a pot of verberna in the window may have arisen in the days when balsams and aromatic plants were cultivated specially for their virtues as disinfectants and purifiers of the air. Be that as it may, the scent of the verberna is generally popular and is to be recommended to all weak and nervous people to whom strong manufactured scents are rightfully an abomination.
