Opening lead—six or clubs.

Italy won its match against Switzerland in the recent World Bridge Olympiad by a score of 28 to 21. Here is one of the hands they played which proved to be decisive.

The South South made a light third-hand bid of a spade, which Garozzo overcalled with one no-trump. North, not vulnerable, interjected two diamonds doubled by Forquet, and from then on the Swiss were in trouble. They finally wound up in three clubs doubled.

Garozzo, whose fine defensive play was a highlight of the tournament, selected the six of clubs as his opening lead. Forquet took the king and returned a club. West cashed the A-Q, and, with this timely start dummy was immediately out of trumps.

Garozzo now led the ace of diamonds, hoping to persuade declarer that East had the king. South elected to discard a spade, whereupon Garozzo continued with the four of diamonds.

Dummy played the eight. East the nine, and declarer ruffed. South then cashed four heart tricks, ending in dummy, and led the ten of spades, which lost to the Jack.

Garozzo now played the seven of diamonds. Declarer, still under the impression that East had the king, covered with the ten. The Jack forced South to ruff with his last trump, and the defense took the rest with two high spades and the king of diamonds. As a result, South went down three—500 points.

This turned out to be an especially poor score for the Swiss because their teammates at the other table, holding the East-West cards, contracted for three notrump and went down one. The 600-point loss cost the Swiss team 12 IMPs.

Switzerland was the only country in the Olympiad to field a four-man team. The other 28 countries all had five or six players on their squads. The Swiss foursome played 28 sessions in a row without a rest and did wonderfully well to finish fifth.
