Strange But True

By F. H. MacArthur

Ponsoby, England, boasts of a unique church and hall. Bordered with fine trees, the Hall has a portico with columns, 12 feet high, each cut from a single piece of stone. It has been the home of the Stanley family since the 14th century. Incidentally, it was a Stanley who picked up the crown at Bosworth Field and placed it on the head of Henry VII.

In the church are memorials to several of the Stanley clan, including Edward Stanley who was a member of parliament for 20 years and could count back 24 generations to his ancestor Henry Stanley.

The little church has braved the battle and the breeze of 700 years. While some remodeling has taken place over the years, its 13th century walls still stand in good condition. The east window has the crucifixion together with pictures of Paul and Peter and John and Barnabas. Another window shows our Saviour while two lancets in the tower have figures of Faith and Hope.

Two ancient stone coffins may be seen in the chancel, one with a sword by its side and the other with a shears. Beside an old grave, two very old men, with long flowing beards and wearing shorts and buttoned coats and odd little bowler boots, are supposed to represent grave-diggers waiting for a corpse.

In Rockcliffe cemetery is an inscription of a sailor who in 35 years service captured 31 enemy ships and was rewarded with a special gold medal from George the Third.

In the same burying ground you'll find this charming epitaph: Two living, planted trees; of one is made This chest wherein my body now is laid.

Indeed, all ancient graveyards are gold mines of news nuggets if only they could be gathered, printed and placed before the public.

The oldest and finest church in Cumberland is St. Bees. Among stones kept here as relics are a stamp, a piscina, and a mortar all belonging to the 12 century. There are coffin stones 800 years old, carved with crosses and swords and shears; a particularly fine one shows an archer drawing his bow. But the most interesting possession of St. Bees is a remarkable stone believed to date from the 8th century. It is carved with an ugly dragon turning to snarl at a little armed figure attacking the creature from the rear. One part of the stone is decorated with plaitwork, the other end bears an amazing carving somewhat resembling a bear's head.

The church possesses a remarkably old register in that the writing bears the exquisite fine scroll so common in early English writing. In its vestry is a music cupboard with carved portraits of persons famous in the English musical world, Wesley, Smart, Best, Willis and others.

Threefold used to be the home of wrestlers and huntsmen. Forty-five of the latter have monuments erected to their memory in the little cemetery. Chief among them is John Crosier who, for sixty-four of his eighty years was master of the chase.

Hard by the cemetery stands the little church with its two bells: at least 500 years old, a Black Letter Bible of 1613. The church records go back to the days of Queen Elizabeth and tell of the quaint custom by which a local couple making a promise of marriage were fined five shillings if either of the party broke the solemn promise.

The most appalling disaster in British railway history was when the Tay Bridge two miles long, and consisting of 83 spans of lattice girders, was carried away in a gale of 150 miles an hour.

A train carrying 70 passengers was crossing the bridge at the time. It was swept into the river. Not one soul escaped, and some of the bodies were found several miles away.

Believe it or not, poet Wordsworth wrote 34 sonnets on the little river Duddon. His first sonnet on the river was written in the poet's 36th year. Then laid aside for 14 years when it became part of the published volume of the 34 sonnets referred to. Wordsworth knew and loved the river from his boyhood as a frequent visitor to Broughton-in-Furness near where the Duddon enters Duddon Sands.

The author of Gulliver, Jonathan Swift, was taken when a small child from his poverty-stricken home in Ireland and carried off to Whitehaven, England. The nurse later wrote the boy's mother telling

IN MEMORIAM

JAMES E. AHEARN

There passed peacefully away on March 8th, 1952, the soul of James E. Ahearn, Pleasant View, leaving his home on earth for a better one in Heaven.

Only a day previous was it noticeable that he was not as well as expected. His death came suddenly having retained consciousness to the last when his spirit winged its flight to his Creator.

He was administered the last rites of the Holy Catholic Church by his pastor a few hours before his death.

James was born in Waterford on April 26th, 1900, the son of John J. Ahearn and Elizabeth Gavin, both of whom have predeceased him. There are left to cherish his memory, three sisters and three brothers, also a niece at their home: (Josie) Mrs. Gus Ellsworth, Nail Pond; (Viola) Mrs. Peter Casey, Waterford; Bernetta, Timothy, Albert, and Edmund at home, and a niece, Margaret Casey, Halifax.

His funeral was held from his home to the Immaculate Conception Church, Palmer Road, on March 10th at 9.30 a.m., where Requiem Mass was celebrated by Rev. Patrick Walsh, P.P., who also officiated at the grave. His remains were then conveyed to the cemetery adjoining the church, where all that was mortal of a kind brother was laid to rest beside his mother and father, there to await the resurrection morn.

The pallbearers were: Emmett Ahearn, Richard Ellsworth, Chester Ellsworth, Ignatius Gavin, John W. Neilligan and Edward C. Gaudet.

May his soul rest in peace.
