

THE FAIR GOD.

BOOK FOUR.

CHAPTER V.

All day and night the public resorts—streets, houses, temples—were burdened with the multitude, whose fear, as the hour of entry drew nigh, yielded to their curiosity. And when, at last, the road the visitors would come by was settled, the whole city seemed to breathe easier.

A soldier, sauntering down the street, is beset with citizens.

"A pleasant day, O son of Huitzil!"

"What news?"

"I have been to the temple."

"And what says the teocalli now?"

"Nothing. They are no signs. Like the stars, the hearts of the victims will not answer."

"What! Did not Huitzil speak last night?"

"O yes!" And the warrior smiles with satisfaction.

"Last night he bade the priests tell the king not to oppose the entry of Malinche."

"Then what?"

"Why, here in the city he would ent the strangers to the last one."

"And all the citizens cry in chorus, 'Praised be Huitzil!'"

Further on the warrior overtakes a comrade in arms.

"Are we to take our shields to the field, O, my brother?" he asks.

"All is peaceful yet—nothing but embassies."

"Is it true that the lord Caecama is to go in state, and invite Malinche to Tenochtitlan?"

"He sets out to-day."

"Ha, ha! Of all voices for war, his was the loudest. Where caught he the merchant's cry for peace?"

"In the temples; it may be from Huitzil!"

The answer was given in a low voice, and with an ironic laugh.

"Well, well, comrade, there are but two lords fit, in time like this, for the love of warriors—Cuitlahua and Guatamozin. They still talk of war."

"Cuitlahua, Cuitlahua!" And the laugh rises to boisterous contentment.

"Why, he has consented to receive Malinche in Iztapalapan and entertain him with a banquet in his palace. He has gone for that purpose now. The Lord of Colohua is with him."

"Then we have only the 'tzin'?"

The fellow sighs like one sincerely grieved.

"Only the 'tzin, brother, only the 'tzin! and he is banished!"

They shake their heads, and look what they dare not speak, and go their ways.

The Spaniards reached Iztapalapan, the excitement in the capital became irrepressible. The cities were but an easy march apart, most of it along the causeway. The going and coming may be imagined. The miles of dyke were covered by a continuous procession, while the lake, in a broad line from town to town, was darkened by canoes. Cortes' progress through the streets of Iztapalapan was antitypical of the grander reception awaiting him in Tenochtitlan.

In the latter city there was no sleep that night. The tianguis in particular was densely filled, not by traders, but by a mass of newsmongers, who hardly knew whether they were most pleased or alarmed.

The general neglect of business had exceptions; at least one portico shone with unusual brilliancy till morning. Every great merchant is a philosopher in the midst of calamities, he is serene, because it is profit's time; before time of famine he buys up all the corn; in forethought of pestilence, he secures all the medicine; and the world, counting his gains, says delightedly, What a wise man! I will not say the Chalcan was of that honored class; he thought himself a benefactor, and was happy to accommodate the lords, and help them divide their time between his palace and that of the king. It is hardly necessary to add that his departments were well patronized, though, in truth, his pulque was in greater demand than his chocolate.

The drinking-chamber, about the close of the third quarter of the night, presented a lively picture. For the convenience of the many patrons, tables from other rooms had been brought in. Some of the older lords were far gone in intoxication; slaves darted to and fro, removing goblets, or bringing them back replenished. A few minstrels found listeners among those who happened to be too stupid to talk, though not too sleepy to drink. Every little while a new-comer would enter, when, if he were from Iztapalapan, a crowd would surround him, allowing neither rest nor refreshment until he had told the things he had seen or heard. Amongst others, Hualpa and Io' chanced to find their way thither. Maxtia, seated at a table with some friends, including the Chalcan, called them to him; and, as they had attended the banquet of the Lord Cuitlahua, they were quickly provided with seats, goblets, and an audience of eager listeners.

"Certainly, my good chief, I have seen Malinche and passed the afternoon looking him and his people," said Hualpa to Maxtia. "It may be that I am too much influenced by the 'tzin to judge them; but, if they are teules, so are we. I longed to try my javelin on them."

"Was their behavior unseemly?"

"Call it as you please. I was in the train when, after the banquet, the lord Cuitlahua took them to see his gardens. As they strode the walks, and sniffed the flowers, and plucked the fruit; as they moved along the canal with its lining of stone, and stopped to drink at the fountains, I was made feel that they thought everything, not merely my lord's property, but my lord himself belonged to them; they said as much by their looks and actions, by their insolent swagger."

"Was the 'tzin there?"

"From the aceozas of a temple he saw them enter the city; but he was not at the banquet. I heard a story showing how he would treat the strangers if he had the power. One of the priests, out with a party, came to the temple where he happened to be, and went up to see to it. In the sanctuary one of them raised his spear and struck the image of the god. The papas threw up their hands and shrieked; he rushed upon the impious wretch and carried him to the sacrificial stone, struck the victim out and called to the papas, 'Come, the victim is ready!' When the other teules would have attacked him he offered to fight them all. The strange priest interfered and they departed."

The applause of the bystanders was loud and protracted; when it had somewhat abated Xoil, whose thoughts from habit ran chiefly upon the edibles, said:

"My Lord Cuitlahua is a giver of good saps. Pray tell us about the course."

"Peace! be still, Chalcan!" cried Maxtia, angrily. "What care we whether Malinche ate wolf-meat or quail?"

Xoil bowed; the lords laughed.

Then a gray-haired cacique behind Io' asked, "Tell us rather what Malinche said."

Hualpa shook his head. "The conversation was tedious. Everything was said through an interpreter—a woman born in the province Painalla; so I paid little attention. I recollect, however, he asked many questions about the great king, and about the Empire and Tenochtitlan. He said his master, the governor of the universe, had sent him here. He gave much time, also, to explaining his religion. I might have understood him, uncle, but my ears were too full of the rattle of arms."

"What! Sat they at the table armed?" asked Maxtia.

"All of them; even Malinche."

"That was not the worst," said Io' earnestly. "At the same table my lord Cuitlahua entertained a band of beggarly Tascalcan chiefs. Sooner should my tongue have been torn out!"

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.
