Testimonial From Duluth, Minnesota.

DEAR MRS. ROSS.—Having tested your "MAGIC HEALER," I wish to express my gratitude to you by this testimonial, which you can use, if you think it will assist you in selling it. Having cut my hand severely with a chisel, the corner of the chisel having entered the palm of my hand, making a long and deep cut, I applied your "MAGIC HEALER" at once, and after three applications I was able to go to work, and in three days the cut was healed up.

Yours truly,
ALONZO H. LAVERS.

A PROMINENT CLERGYMAN, whose name I am at liberty to reveal on application, writes as follows:—

Mr. A. J. JOHNSON:—

Dear Sir,—For a number of years I have been suffering from indigestion and its consequent troubles. Some months since, however, I was advised to try your "Everybody's Pills," and am happy to say I am now free from any symptoms of indigestion. I regard "Everybody's Pills" as a thoroughly reliable Family Medicine, mild in their action, and having no unpleasant after-effects so common to such remedies, and I would, with confidence, recommend all who have suffered as I have to try "Everybody's Pills."

Yours very cordially,

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

The Scott Act Campaign.

SIR,—As the date of the election in the matter of the repeal of the Scott Act has been fixed, and the press are taking sides on the question, it is but natural to suppose that the contest has fairly begun. You will agree with me that there is nothing to be gained by half statements on one side or another, and that slurs and mere vapor are not in order on such an important subject as that which is now before the public; and further that there is everything to be gained by a fair and honest discussion of the whole question. I hope that on both sides we are seeking not the benefit of the few, but of the whole community; and it is in view of the whole question that I write this letter. I do not wish it to be understood that I write in the spirit of mere criticism or with any desire to find fault with the position of THE EXAMINER on the matter. I yield to you the right to oppose the Act, even as I claim for myself the right to support it.

I have assumed that you oppose the act; and what leads me to do so is that the general tenor of the paper has given that impression. If you will turn to your file you will find that when a point could be made against the act in any county or town where it was in force, you were not slow to reprint it in your paper, and I am not aware that you put in anything that seemed favorable to the retention of it; all of which, from your standpoint, was justly your right. Now, sir, you have seen a license system at work in this community and you have seen the Scott Act, and the conclusion come to on your part is that the license system is preferable to our present system, and your action asks that the people do away with the present mode of restricting the traffic and return to the former. You must have good reasons for asking that; but as far as I can gather from your paper you have fallen into the same mistake as that charged by you against the clergyman at the late temperance meeting, viz: you give no reason why we should return to a system with which the people were then and are now heartily tired of.

I hold that you owe it to your readers, who are debating the matter with themselves, to lay before them the grounds on which you ask for a return to a system under which the traffic has grown. Two restrictive measures are now before them; both have had a trial. Will you print side by side the importations under the one system and under the other. The arrests for drunkenness under the one and under the other; the amount of consumption per head under the license system, and the amount per head under the Scott Act. Explanations may be needed on your part as on mine; but let us first have facts and the explanations can follow.

You have at hand the blue books and the police register and can furnish the material; then we shall be able to discuss the matter, and the people will be able to say which of the systems are the more restrictive.

Further, you seem to prefer a high license system to our present mode of restricting the traffic. You have no doubt watched closely the operations of that system and are pleased with it else you would not ask the community to adopt it. At the present, I do not say anything as to the morality of a license system of any kind, I am only asking for the results of a high license system—say for five or ten years in any province or state, so that we may be able to contrast the one with the other and decide the question on its merits?

The people whose views I represent are ready to discuss the matter from our standpoint, and no doubt you are ready to defend your position. Would you kindly lay before us the facts on both sides, and let the community know as between two restrictive measures which is the more restrictive.

Hoping that you may comply with my request, I am respectfully yours,

JAS. CARRUTHERS.

Something Must Be Done!

SIR,—This expression seems to voice the sentiments of a large number of people in view of the ravages of intemperance among young men, notwithstanding the Scott Act, and present efforts to enforce it. That all good citizens should stand by this Act, resisting to the last all efforts for its repeal, and enforcing its measures to the utmost, ought not to admit of a dissenting opinion. There is another phase of the subject, however, not so aptly or generally appreciated. It has been repeatedly said that a gin-mill can no more be run without boys than a saw-mill without logs. Until such time, then, as the mills can be closed, an important consideration both for the safety of the boys and the retention and enforcement of the Scott Act, consists in keeping the legs from the mill and diverting them into other channels. In other words, the young men must be induced to keep away from the saloons. How is this to be done? Answers more or less good come thick and fast. Moral suasion, pleasant homes, good teaching, parental authority are all good, but often all or singly fail. It is a peculiarity of young men that they seek one another, and are influenced by one another more than any other class of the community. This is witnessed in their constant tendency to congregate and club together. The fact is: Young men as a rule will not spend their evenings at home. They gravitate to the town centres to find life, enjoyment and associates. There they are greeted and drawn in by the light and comfort and good cheer of the saloons. Moral suasion is all right, and often kindly received. Precepts of parents and sound teaching are well, and they often resolve to heed them; but they do not afford light and warmth and a jolly time when one is down street. The saloons and gambling halls do. You may depend upon it, in the first stages this is the strong point with young men. It is not until later that the vices, per se, attract. Now, if this view of the situation is at all correct, to find a remedy, or at least a partial one, ought not to be a matter of insurmountable difficulty. This "something" which exists in the minds of so many, should take definite form. It lies in providing the light and warmth and cheer—the fellowship and social enjoyment under pure and wholesome auspices. Some are grasping this idea and proposing the establishment of rooms suitably fitted with musical instruments, games, and such other harmless attractions as will constitute a social home for young men, such as will meet their views and furnish a substitute for the things they, for the most part, seek in the dangerous and unlawful resorts. Why is not this a sensible plan? It is just what other places are doing through their Young Men's Christian Associations. Why should not Charlottetown? Why form another society and establish other rooms, when one of the avowed objects of this society, is this very thing?—when it is already in possession of a building well located, and which, by a little enterprise and sanctified common sense, can be admirably adapted to the purpose? Why not turn our attention to this existing organization and make what it ought to be, and what, by its constitution, it professes to be—an agency for "the physical, mental, social, as well as spiritual, improvement of young men?" This Association already provides an excellent reading room. This should be thrown open to every young man who will use it. To this should be added social rooms, with the attractions already referred to. The gymnasium should be rehabilitated, fitted with the best apparatus and made the solid attraction, which it can be. Lastly, a young man in charge to act as host, greet the fellows when they come in, get acquainted with them, and thus render effective the advantages provided. These, without doubt, are some of the lines upon which this Association should be working. This, it would seem, would meet the views of those who feel that "something must be done," as there is little doubt it would meet the views of the young men themselves, who would, as elsewhere, in large numbers avail themselves of its privileges, relieve the apprehensions (all too well founded) of many parents and good people, and go far towards solving the liquor problem, so far as the young men of the community are concerned.

ONE OF THE YOUNG MEN.

Literary Note.

"Our Homes" is the name of a new magazine issued by Our Homes Publishing Co., Brookville, Ont., the first number of which we have just received. The magazine is well printed, on heavy paper, as is designed to occupy a field hitherto untouched by Canadian publications, being devoted to building, home decoration, home furnishing, house-keeping, and choice literature. One feature of the magazine worthy of note is the publication monthly of original architectural designs and specifications for residences for people of moderate means. The publishers, in order to increase their circulation, offer an error competition, in which cash prizes aggregating $3,000 will be given to the parties discovering the largest number of mistakes (wrongly spelled words) in the December issue of their publication. On receipt of 15 cents in postage stamps the publishers will send the December issue of their magazine and rules for the error contest to any address. The prizes they offer are certainly exceedingly liberal, and the competition is not at all difficult.

ADVISE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used by millions of mothers for children teething for over fifty years with perfect success. It relieves the little sufferer at once, produces natural quiet sleep by freeing the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button."

It is very pleasant to taste, soothes the child, softens the gums, allays pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

A $750 COTTAGE—Or its equivalent in cash will be given to the person detecting the greatest number of errors, words wrongly spelled or misplaced in the December issue of "OUR HOMES." In addition will be given two cash prizes of $200 each, four of $100, eight of $50, ten of $25, twenty-five of $10, fifty of $5, one hundred of $2, and one hundred and fifty of $1, distributed in the order mentioned in the rules and regulations, which will be sent with a copy of December issue on receipt of 15 cents in stamps. Special cash prizes given away almost every day during competition which closes February 1st, 1891. Address Our Homes Publishing Co., Brookville, Canada. nov28 dy wy 2w.
