

THE ANNUAL Lobster Carnival livestock exhibition opened yesterday morning and continued throughout the day until late yesterday afternoon. With the grand champion female and grand male champion respectively in the Scottish beef Shorthorn competition are Marlene Dollar and her father Gerald Dollar of Winsloe. The animals have won both trophies in this annual exhibition for three consecutive years.

Judging Is Underway For Carnival Livestock

SUMMERSIDE — The annual carnival livestock exhibition got underway yesterday with judging being held in the Dual Purpose Shorthorns, Jersey and Guernsey breeds.

Judges for these events were W.E. Brown of Kensington and L.W. Roper. Mr. Brown judged the Jersey and Guernsey classes while Mr. Roper judged the beef and Dual Purpose Shorthorn breeds. Judging got underway at 10 o'clock yesterday morning with the Jersey class being the first.

There was only one herd competing in this class, that of Gordon Docherty, Kingston. Originally the herd of T. Glyndon and Son, Kensington, was to compete but Mr. Glyndon Sr. suffered injuries in a farm accident and was unable to enter, thus leaving the field open to the Docherty herd which swept all the prizes and the trophy for the Jersey class.

In the Dual Purpose Shorthorn judging two animals from the Waldron MacPhee herd of Elmwood captured both the grand champion awards in the male and female divisions.

Drainie IS Leacock; 'Leacock' IS Funny

By A. C. HOLMAN

After an absence of seven years John Drainie returned to the stage and everyone who was in the audience last evening for "Laugh With Leacock" will agree that he was magnificent.

To the people of today John Drainie is Stephen Leacock, Leacock, they have heard him on radio, watched him on television and now for the first time they have the opportunity to see him performing Leacock in person.

Stephen Leacock was born in 1869 and died during the second war in 1944. He grew up on a farm near Orillia, Ont., went to college and taught at McGill University. In the span of his life he wrote nearly 40 books, some on economics and political science which he taught at McGill and other humorous ones on people and their lives. He is remembered today for his humor.

"Laugh With Leacock" is taken from some of his works as a humorist. It is an extremely funny and entertaining show, but not in the same way as "Spring Thaw".

FUTILE COMPARISON

To compare it with "Spring Thaw" would be a futile effort. "Thaw" is contemporary, it's a revue, the humor is thrown at you.

"Laugh With Leacock" is not at all contemporary, and yet much of the humor and social criticisms are as true today as when Leacock wrote them.

"Laugh With Leacock" is a collection of sketches by the great humorist woven, mainly by Mr. Drainie, into a marvellous stage presentation.

There are no real "belly laughs" in the show a more relaxed atmosphere permeates the theatre than when "Spring Thaw" is playing.

Appearing with Mr. Drainie are Dave Broadfoot, Muriel West, Liane Marshall and Ritchie Simpson.

The performance of Eric House was extremely well done and though he plays a lesser role than John Drainie he is a vital character and contributes in no small way to the show's success.

Mr. House mentioned after the show that he was not entirely satisfied with the way things went and that he has a few changes he would like to see implemented. But to those of us in the audience there was little in the show that needs any changing.

AT A LOSS TO FAULT

Dave Broadfoot's performance, too, was one that we across the footlights would be at a loss to find any fault with. Dave is very happy with the show and he expressed his pleasure at being a part of it. "It's different from 'Spring Thaw'," he said, "you have to act a lot more."

The performances given by Muriel West, Liane Marshall and Ritchie Simpson were more than adequate and Miss West in particular was very good in the minor pieces she did.

There were those in last evening's audience who felt that Miss Marshall's introductions of the various skits and sketches detracted from the mood of the show. Miss Marshall, for those readers who were not at the show, is a quite beautiful blonde and her costume demonstrated her figure admirably.

The show was taken from 10 works of Stephen Leacock, ranging from "Sunshine Sketches of a Little Town" to "Literary Lapses".

VERY APROPOS

One skit entitled "Too Much College" is very apropos here on the island as this time when we are trying to sort out our higher education problem. Leacock asked for 50 acres of land, a few buildings and a dozen professors. Professors who were not with the world, but off in one of their own.

John Drainie first started doing the character of Stephen Leacock for JBC radio back in the 40s. In 1957 he was involved in a stage production of some Leacock's works to be played in Orillia, but through lateness in the season and the inevitable financial problem the show never did get off the ground.

Orillia's loss is our gain and though there are a few minor technical problems to be worked out, "Laugh With Leacock" is definitely a "must" for everyone.

back of his head, but he was not bleeding. I rushed to Grosvenor House (a hotel) to phone for a doctor, but then another doctor was trying artificial respiration. The lady (Mrs. Tree) had started to give him the kiss of life."

A doctor was called from the sportsmen's club. He gave Stevenson an injection and administered heart massage.

An embassy spokesman said he did not know where Stevenson was going when he collapsed.

John Farr, superintendent of a nearby building, said he saw Mrs. Tree, dressed in a turquoise suit, comforting Stevenson on the sidewalk. Yates propped a coat under Stevenson's head.

When an ambulance arrived, the crew brought out an oxygen cylinder and gave oxygen to Stevenson for about five minutes.

"He was put on a stretcher and carried into the ambulance," Farr said. "The lady in blue went with him."

Although Stevenson was on a private visit, he was staying with U.S. Ambassador David K. Bruce at the ambassador's residence.

Wealthy from family businesses, Stevenson had served in U.S. governmental jobs for more than 20 years and was active in preliminaries leading to formation of the United Nations.

He won the Illinois governorship in 1948 by an unprecedented majority, sweeping a state that had chosen only three of the Democratic governors since the Civil War.

He went on to become the Democratic nominee for president in both 1952 and 1956, losing both elections to Dwight D. Eisenhower.

As one of his first acts in office, President John F. Kennedy appointed Stevenson as the chief U.S. delegate to the United Nations. That was Jan. 23, 1961.

Stevenson was known at the United Nations for his affability and humor as well as for his firmness in dealing with problems that involved the Cold War and the viewpoint of the United States against communism.

"Communism organizes terror," he once said. "It is without spiritual content or comfort. It provides no basic security."

Here in London he had talked only a few hours before his death with Michael Stewart, the British foreign secretary.

Stewart, expressing British grief, said Stevenson will be "remembered not only for what he did and what he stood for, but for the tolerant, humane way he acted."

Stevenson is survived by three sons—Adlai III, a member of the Illinois legislature who is 34; Borden, 32, of New York, and John Fell, 28, of San Francisco. The two younger sons are in the real estate business while Adlai III is a lawyer in Chicago.

Their mother, Mrs. Ellen Borden Stevenson, was divorced from Stevenson in 1949 after more than 20 years of marriage.
