A CONCERT

Chapter 47

"Have you found that out all ready?" George asked and smiled at her. "We're all in love with Alora."

Pan took her hand from her mouth, where it had flown the instant she realized her thoughts had been expressed aloud.

"Of course! She knew George was in love with her friend. Who could help it?"

She felt awfully sorry for him. He must be unhappy about it. George meantime did not seem particularly unhappy. He seemed rather amused.

"You're a naive child," he said. "Finally, 'Do you like music?'" "No," Pan answered. "That is I never heard any. I like dance records on phonographs well enough because they don't try to be anything but tunes in a special sort of time, but I don't care for the classical things."

Then she added: "I ought to. Aunt Maude says I haven't any musical sense, because I didn't like the way our piano teacher played at her concert."

"I'm sure I shouldn't either, George answered and Pan felt suddenly justified in her dislike of Miss Ethridge's hurry-scurry rendering of various 'classical' selections.

"There's a nice concert tonight," George said. "Better come with me. We'll have a bite of dinner first in a quiet little restaurant 'know of.'"

Not for worlds would he have missed the chance of taking this young girl to her first concert! George had lived in a world of women who had read and travelled, tried, intimated and tasted most of the experience of life—until most of them had lost their capacity to enjoy living. At least they had been educated beyond the enjoyment of simple pleasures.

He was rewarded beyond his greatest hopes. He would have been sufficiently rewarded by the joy that lit up Pan's dark eyes and the flush that came into her pale skin. Think of being asked to dinner in a restaurant with a fascinating man! It was the first time this had happened to her.

George wisely took her to a tiny restaurant where they were seated at a table d'hôte meal and where Madame knew most of her customers. It was of course quite grand to the child new to the city.

The big concert hall awed her. She listened, entranced, to the well modulated buzz that rose from a couple of thousand throats. "Isn't it pretty?" she whispered. "It sounds like the hum of bees in the sun."

George smiled. The buzz of talk before a concert always annoyed him. Suddenly however, he found the gigantic humming—not pretty but at least bearable.

New York that winter had the best music in the world and this was one of the most famous orchestras with a conductor of international reputation.

"She's getting the finest of everything for a first taste," he thought. "I wonder how she'll take it?"

Then when the symphony started he forgot his comrade, and lost himself as he always did in the soaring sweeping melody of the symphony.

There was a symphony, an intermission, then a shorter piece, and a dramatic close with a Scriabin's overpowering "Poeme de l'Extase"—truly ecstasy in music, ecstasy so great as to be almost unbearable. As the music rushed to its crescendo, with strings, brasses, woodwinds and drums and over all the echoing notes of the organ, George became conscious of the girl's hands gripping the arms of her seat so tightly that the bones stood up from the flesh.

He turned ever so slightly. Pan was staring ahead with flushed face and wide eyes, her chest rising and falling with her quick agitated breathing. When the last note echoed away, or rather melted into the thunderous applause, Pan was crying.

"You poor child," George said and laughed a little. "I shouldn't have started you off on something so emotional. Come along, I'll take you home and tell Gloria to put you to bed."

Pan wiped her eyes and protested and apologized. She felt she had utterly disgraced herself. "I'm sorry," she kept repeating. "Don't be sorry for being youthful and emotional, George said. 'Be glad you can feel things so.'"

Pan didn't understand. The concert had given her a violent headache, she couldn't understand that either, because she loved it. Gloria was in when they returned and she gladly went to bed and left them talking in the living room.

"A strange little creature," George remarked. "A bundle of nerves and fears, starved for self-expression, starved for beauty and knowledge."

You'll do her good, Gloria, you're the sort of stimulating mental tonic she needs. I'm not sure whether she'll do you good though, she'll be a responsibility."

J. BERTHAM SIMON, well-known photographer of Tacoma, Wash., who says that since taking Tanac with such good results he now knows why everybody is praising this wonderful medicine.

When they told me about Tanac it seemed almost too good to be true. I know for myself that all they said of it was so," said J. Bertham Simon, 1021 E. 46th St., Tacoma, Wash. a well known photographer.

"I suffered from rheumatism in my shoulders for ten years and at one time had to go to the hospital. I was down in bed for months and hardly able to turn from side to side. I couldn't sleep from pain. My appetite failed and I couldn't trust a thing properly. Gas made me have heartburn for hours after meals."

"In a very short time after I started taking Tanac I actually felt like a new man. I am now entirely rid of rheumatism and my stomach is in first class condition, while I have gained ten pounds and never felt better. I have recommended Tanac to a number of people and I am always glad to say a good word for this remarkable medicine."

BAD FREIGHT WRECK SUNDAY

MONCTON, May 22.—The extra freight No. 3279, north bound in charge of Conductor J. Murphy and Driver Edward Betts was badly wrecked at Derby Junction about 5 o'clock Sunday morning. Ten cars were derailed and were badly smashed up, being scattered along the track for some distance. Luckily none of the train crew sustained injury. The runoff is stated to have been caused by a broken truck on the car loaded with rails.

LARGE PIMPLES ALL OVER FACE

Itched and Burned. Face Disfigured. Cuticura Heals.

"Large, red pimples were scattered all over my face. They festered and itched and burned so that I scratched them for some time. The pimples were so large that I was ashamed to go among my friends. I would lie awake half the night, and my face was awfully disfigured."

"A friend advised me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using them for some time the pimples began to disappear, and when I had used three cakes of Soap and two boxes of Ointment I was healed." (Signed) Harry Feinstein, 36 Pequot St., Hartford, Conn., May 12, 1921.

Use Cuticura for all toilet purposes.

BRITAIN WILL NOT INTERVENE IN IRELAND IS IVEV IN LONDON

LONDON, May 18.—"Britain will not play De Valera's game by intervening in Ireland. We are perfectly aware that that is what he wants us to do with the idea of discrediting us among other nations and destroying the Irish Government. He will not succeed."

This statement was made today by a famous British statesman, name withheld and continues: "Ireland must work out her own destiny. If the Irish people take head and crush the forces of anarchy, she has a chance of becoming one of the leading nations of the world. If they don't she will go down to anarchy and despair and become a laughing stock and byword among the nations. We want her to succeed and we want to give all the help possible, but this job she must do herself."

"I understood that the British statesmen are more hopeful now than a few days ago of the outcome of the Irish struggle. They are pleased with Michael Collins' attitude of determination and sure it will win."

This conversation took place before the news arrived of the failure of the Dublin peace effort and now that the slates have been cleared, Collins has a free field to institute governmental measures, for the restoration of order. His army is strained, well equipped and in good spirits and he now has a police force to take charge as soon as the army clears the rebels from the area. General Sean MacKeown has already cleared Ireland from Dublin to Shannon and is ready to tackle the bad spots in Sligo, Mayo, South Tipperary and parts of Cork and Donegal.

DUBLIN, May 19.—The Daily Eireann debated throughout the day the breakdown of the peace negotiations and then adjourned until tomorrow without coming to any decision. Even yet there is some hope of accommodating the interval will be utilized by the peace-makers to bring the leaders together, and to agree on what proportion each side should have in the way of members. The supporters of the treaty although they claim a great majority in the country, offered to be content with six members out of ten. Those opposed to the treaty wanted the existing proportion in the Daily Eireann to remain fixed.

There was a further disagreement on the constitution of the coalition cabinet and, more important still, on the principles of

"Fool's Paradise" Cecil B. DeMille's Greatest Picture

Cecil B. DeMille's latest Paramount production which will be shown at the Prince Edward Theatre Wednesday, May 24th, and the Strand Theatre Thursday, May 25th, entitled "Fool's Paradise" is awaited with keen interest by all admirers of DeMille productions. It is claimed that he has outdone all his previous productions, in this stirring story of human love, tragedy and thrills. Dorothy Dalton, Mildred Harris, Conrad Nagie, Theodore Kosloff, John Davidson and Julia Faye, are said to vest the leading roles with artistry seldom seen on the screen. Remember the days, dates and theatres.

its operation. Those for the treaty wanted it to assist in the operation of the treaty, their opponents admitted they wanted to evade and destroy the treaty. The dead lock seemed complete.

Nevertheless, Eamonn De Valera repeatedly announced his willingness to join a coalition in the public interest, stipulating only that it would not bind him to abandon his principles. Mr. Griffith was assured that Mr. De Valera was willing to permit the people to decide. Michael Collins, however, showed more of a disposition to welcome De Valera's olive branch and thought coalition might be utilized to consolidate the advantages already gained, which would be jeopardized by a conflict.

What Is Digestion?

DIGESTION is the one great process of life. When digestion is impaired your system suffers from slow starvation.

The result is thin blood, exhausted nerves, depressed spirits and slow, sluggish action of the vital organs.

The symptoms of indigestion are as follows: Mouth: Furred tongue, bitter taste, saliva sticky.
