Dief Says Many Asking Why Two Publications Exempted

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Diefenbaker says many Canadians are asking why Time magazine and Reader's Digest are being exempted from the federal government's legislation aimed at helping Canada's magazine industry against foreign inroads.

"... Nothing has been done by this government which in any way indicates that the great policy of Canadianization will go far enough to ensure that Canadians will have the opportunity within their own land to have their own magazines, unchallenged by unjust competition from outside this country."

Mr. Diefenbaker, speaking during the Commons budget debate, referred to a recent editorial in the Montreal Star attacking the legislature and asking what the Montreal MP's are doing about it.

Liberals represent all but one of the 18 federal constituencies in the Montreal area, which is the base of Canadian operations of Time and Reader's Digest, owned in the U.S.

The opposition leader asked why Industry Minister Drury, MP for Montreal St. Anoine-Westmount, among others, has made no move to help Canadian magazines.

He quoted from a section of the editorial which said the industry minister was pleased with his plan to increase the Canadian content of cars produced in Canada but appears wholly uninteresled in Canadian magazines.

The Canadian editions of Time and Reader's Digest were affected by the original magazine legislation proposed by the former Conservative government under Mr. Diefenbaker. Before it could be enacted, it was amended in early 1963 to exempt the two big magazines, which the royal commission on publications said had cornered 40 per cent of the Canadian magazine advertising dollar. However, this amended legislation, similar to that now proposed by the Liberal administration, also was not proceeded with.

Caouette Says Quebec Lag Can Be Blamed OnCitizens

MONTREAL (CP) — Creditiste Leader Real Caouette said the French-speaking people of Quebec must blame themselves if their economic development lags 15 to 25 years behind that of other provinces.

Addressing the Montreal Junior Board of Trade, Mr. Caouette said any such gap "is definitely not the fault of the English-speaking people in Toronto, Winnipeg or elsewhere."

It existed "because of the French - Canadians from the province of Quebec, who sent to Parliament people with no guts instead of sending aggressive people to defend their interests."

He said he is convinced that Quebec has the means to proceed with its own development and that, in the interests of Canada as a whole, Quebec and the other provinces should have more freedom to handle their own affairs.

"Let Quebec administer its own affairs as it sees fit," he said. "And we feel the same way about the other provinces.

PREDICTS EXPANSION

"Canada will remain Canada. It will experience a tremendous economic expansion through the development of the provinces, each in its own way."

Repeating a view expounded at a party convention in Montreal earlier this year, Mr. Caouette said that "when the Canadian Constitution is amended, it should allow the provinces to control credit.

"We want this in Quebec. If Ontario wants it, it should have it too. Credit should be decentralized to enable each province to expand according to its physical possibilities.

The revised Constitution, he said, should give the provinces control of immigration. "We want to know who is going to come and live with us."

It should also give them control of exports and imports and return to them the direct taxation powers granted in 1867. These had been taken away by the federal government during the Second World War and not returned.

Explaining the economic policies of his Rallement des Creditistes, Mr. Caouette said it would use the Bank of Canada to fill the gap between purchasing power and the production of goods and services.
